Initial Ideas

Idea Generation

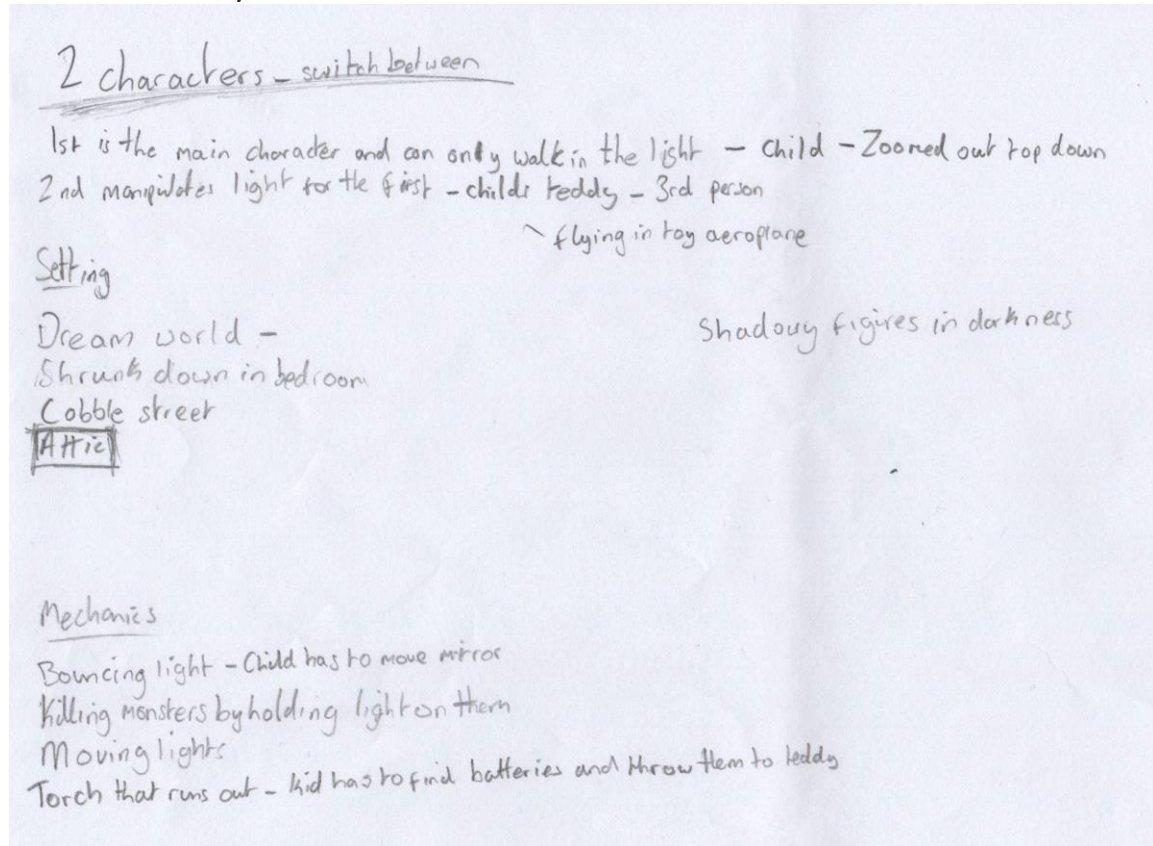

When generating ideas a solid game mechanic was first thought of which the game would focus around. This is how many popular games thrive like Portal (Portal, 2007) for example which is still popular to this day despite its 2007 release date.

Idea #1 – Sand

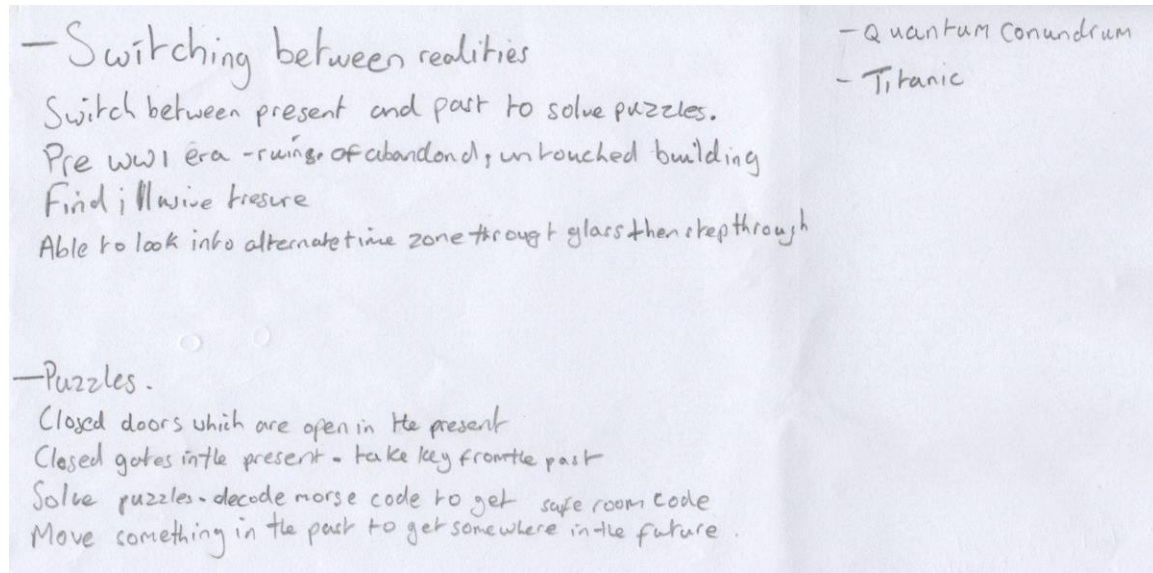

The player is stuck inside a sand timer and has to transfer life from one side to the other. One side of this timer is full of life and the other is dead, the player starts in the alive side and has to steal as much life as they can using a special gun. Then once the timer is over it flips and the player is tipped into the dead world, from here they must place down all of the life they have taken to attempt to re-grow this side. When the timer ends for the final time the player is given a score based on how much they have grown, if it's enough they will advance to the next level. Sand would be suitable for a wide audience being 7+ due to its fun and child friendly gameplay.

Idea #2 – Teddy

A young girl is stuck in a nightmare and the player must help her and her teddy get through the night. This girl and her teddy are stuck in separate places and the girl must not stand in the darkness otherwise the monsters of her nightmares will get her. As teddy the player must direct light so the girl can get through the level, he can do this by bouncing light off mirrors or simply moving a lamp in a certain way. At some points in the game the girl may get attacked by the monsters and the player must act fast switching to the teddy and scaring the monsters away with light. This game would be suitable for ages 13+ due to its slightly dark themes and easy to understand game mechanics.

Idea #3 – Mirror

In the present day a reluctant guy tidies his mother's attic where he finds a chest containing his grandfather's journal and a strange piece of glass. He finds out his grandfather was on to a grand treasure and this glass lets him step into the past. The player must continue their grandfather's quest and use this glass to solve puzzles and get through the levels. They will start in a broken down mansion from the early 1900's, the mansion in the present will be completely broken down but untouched and the alternate dimension will be in the past when the building was in its prime. Puzzles will range from moving things in the past for use in the present and taking items like keys from the past to open locks in the present. Mirror would be suitable for people from 13+ because of its unique in depth game mechanics and immersive environments.

Game Overview

Game Design Goals

Goal #1

Mirror focuses around time travel between two different time zones to solve puzzles and progress through the game world. There will be a great focus on puzzle solving with deep solutions all revolving around the main mechanic of time travel.

Goal #2

The aesthetics for Mirror will be very photorealistic focusing on the contrast between the two time zones which will be aided by the sound. The present will have just ambience like rain and wind while the past will have classical music too really enforce the contrast.

Goal #3

One of the main goals for Mirror is to really immerse the player in the world and encourage them to step between two realities as much as possible. This will be achieved with intriguing level design and the general aesthetics of the game along with the game mechanics.

Common Questions

What is the game?

Mirror is a first person puzzle game where the player continues his grandfather's quest to find a great stash of treasure hidden just before the events of World War I. Along with his grandfather's journal is a strange piece of glass which doesn't look to be much at first but the player soon finds out that it lets them travel between time zones. They must then use this to solve puzzles and progress through the route mapped out in their grandfather's notes. If they manage to progress through the whole route they will find out if this treasure is a myth or they will be rich beyond their wildest dreams.

Why create this game?

The main reason for creating Mirror is to develop a unique and intriguing puzzle game based around a fun game mechanic. This game mechanic is unique to Mirror and will make for an exciting, engaging game anyone can enjoy.

Where does the game take place?

The game takes place in the early 1900's before World War I and the present day. When the player travels back in time they will step into the 1900's and when they are in the present the building will be an identical, run down version of the same level.

What do I control?

You control the main character Chris, who is following in his grandfather's footsteps to try and find an elusive treasure using the power of a shard of glass which allows him to step through time. The player will see the game from a first person perspective to really immerse them in the game world and the character.

What is the main focus?

The main focus is to progress through the different levels in the game by solving puzzles to aid progression. This is all in pursuit of the supposed treasure written about in the journal.

What's different?

This game has a very unique game mechanic which has never really been previously explored. And the focus is purely on puzzle solving instead of an extremely powerful character mindlessly killing to grow stronger. The character is just a normal guy with an adventurous urge fuelled by his grandfather's discovery.

Feature Set

Gameplay & Game Mechanics

At first popular games were looked at to see how they become successful, a lot of games like Portal (Portal, 2007) will have a simple but fun game mechanic which the whole game will revolve around. Therefore Mirror's main game mechanic is the ability to see and step into an alternate time zone with the touch of a button. This allows for a lot of interesting puzzles and intriguing environments.

Puzzles

The main focus of the game is to solve various puzzles using the game mechanic of stepping through time zones. These puzzles will aid in the players progression throughout the game helping them to advance towards the treasure.

Puzzle #1:

One of the first puzzles the player will face is a box which they need to unstick in the present. To do this the player must step into the past and move the box from where the rubble is in the present, unsticking it.

Puzzle #2

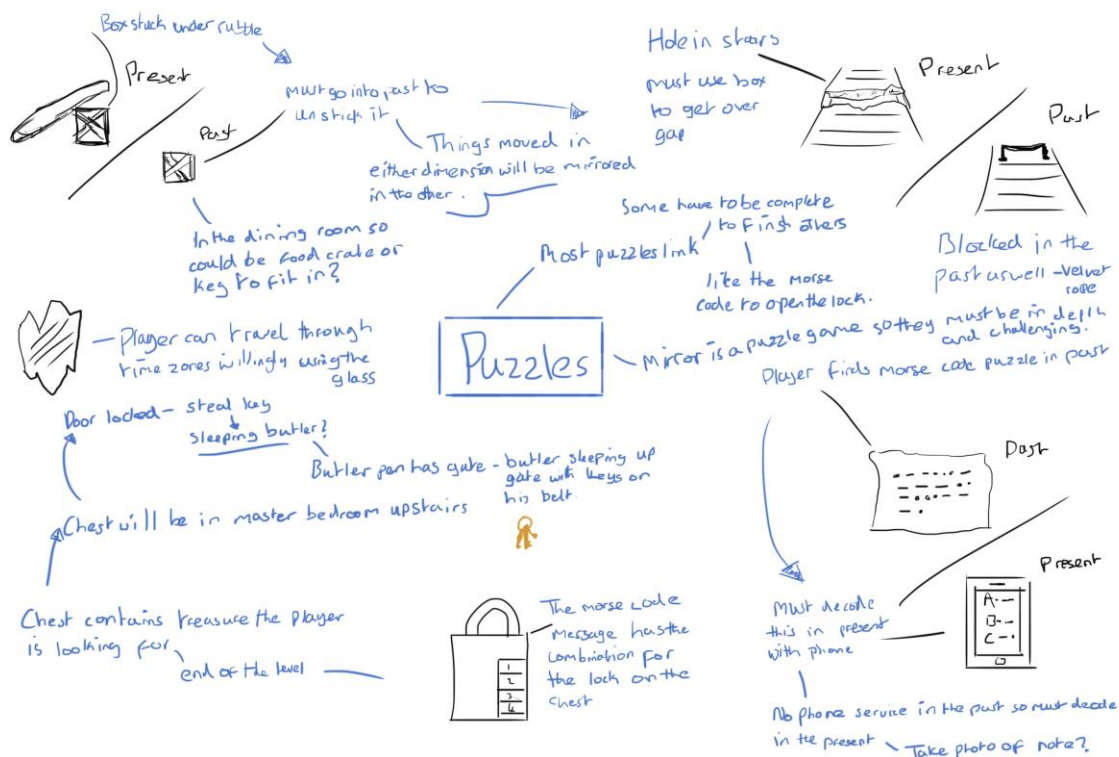

When advancing up the stairs the player will find that the staircase is blocked in both dimensions to get past this they must use the box they unstuck earlier to get past the broken stairs in the present.

Puzzle #3

At the end of the game the player will be faced with a chest locked by a combination lock, to get this combination the player must steal a Morse code message from the past and take it into the future to decode. This will then give them the code to open the lock and finish the level.

Puzzle #4

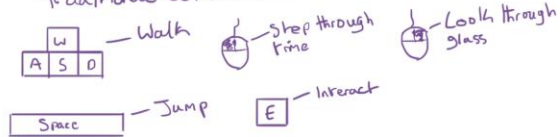

To get into the bedroom at the end of the level the player must use a key, this key can be obtained from the butler on the first floor in the past.

Controls

Simple easy to use controls.

Traditional control scheme.

Interactable objects will have an outline when the player gets close.

Easy to identify which objects can be interacted with.

Controls will be customisable

Player will be able to change any control to their liking if they do not like the preset ones.

Similar to Portal

Game will primarily developed for PC

Would work on consoles - Xbox One
PS4

Concept would be as enjoyable on console and with further development would be developed for both.

Games like Portal do well on the platform.

Audience

Contains no violence just puzzling

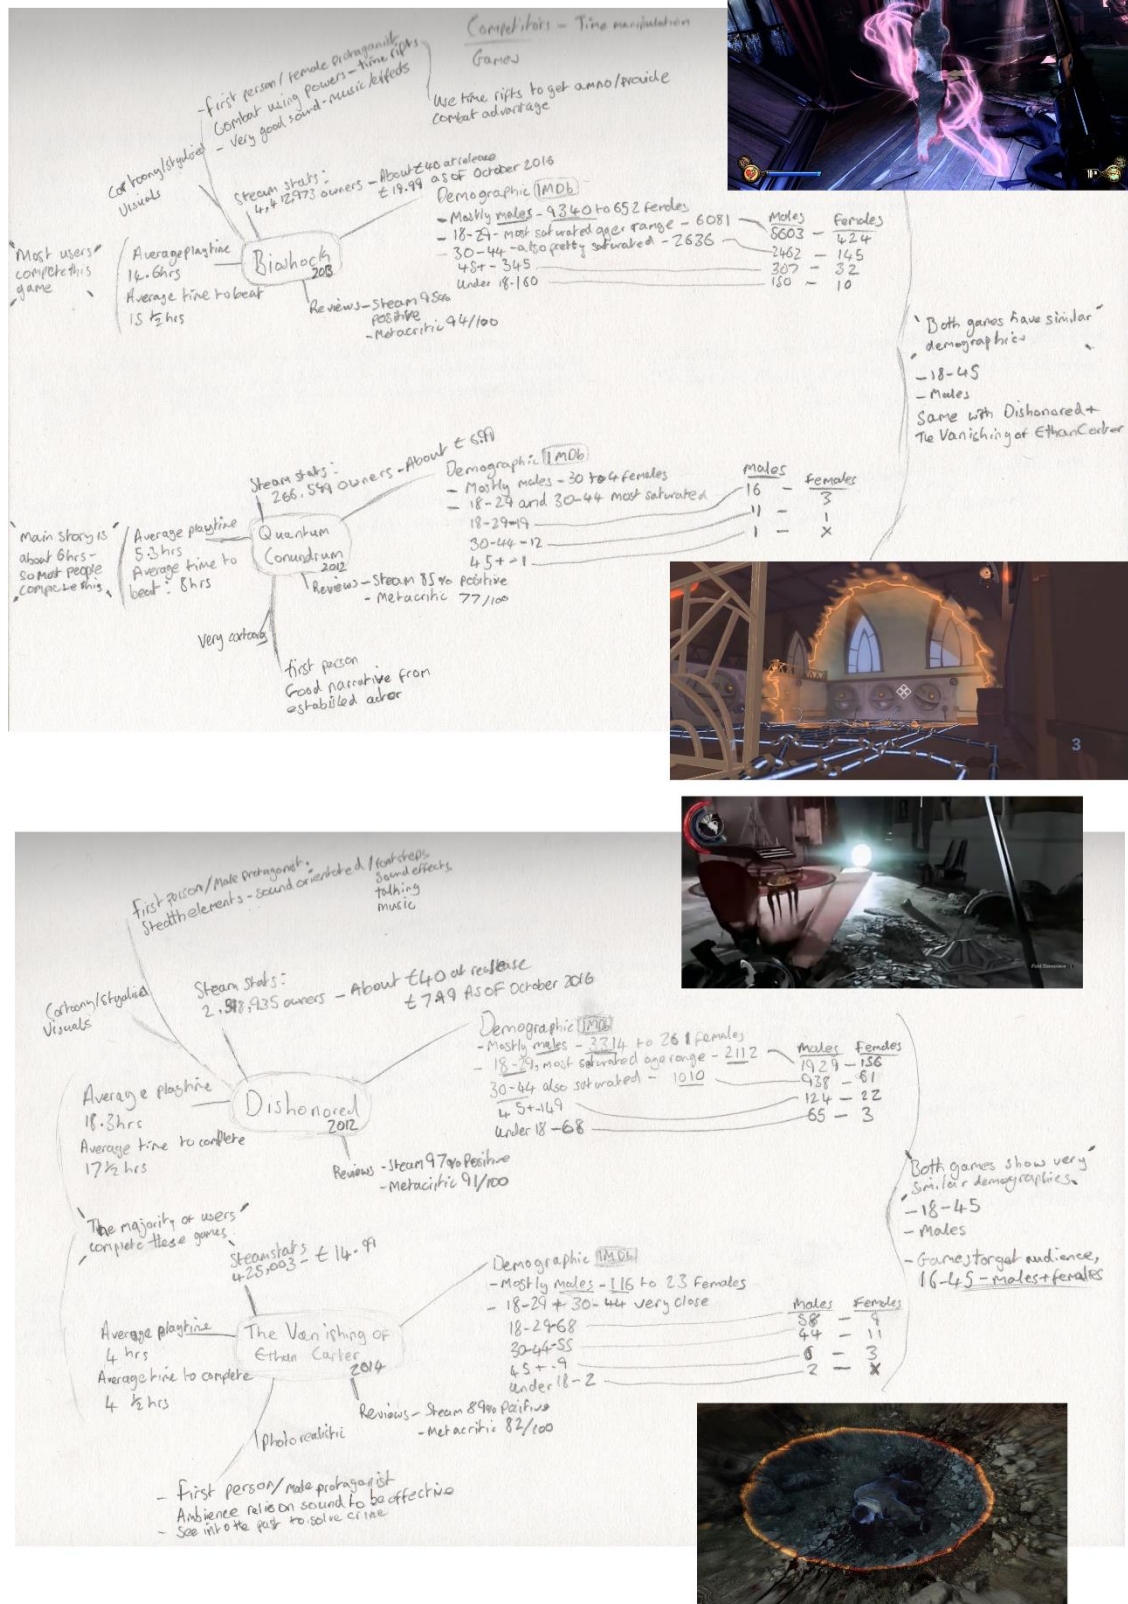

Game would have the Everyone rating due to the fact there is no violence or violent imagery.

The game will have a simple tutorial which will teach the player how to switch dimensions with the glass.

They will also be taken through the first puzzle - unsticking the box.

Story

One afternoon Chris, a 36 year old male reluctantly helps his mother clean out the attic of her house which she inherited from her parents. Here Chris discovers a dusty old chest which appears to be his grandfathers, upon opening it he finds a journal and a strange piece of glass. The journal documents an unimaginable amount of treasure hidden by a powerful family just before the events of World War I. Chris soon finds out that the piece of glass, first passed off as a piece of junk, has a hidden power. It allows him to see and then step into the era of this powerful family. Using this he carries on from where his grandfather left off in his journal, using this strange piece of glass to get through the route mapped out in the journal, picking up more and more clues along the way.

Art Style

Mirror will have a photorealistic art style to really try and immerse the player in the game world. The past dimension will be grand and colourful matching the era perfectly and the present will be a run down version of this with broken, dirty, overgrown objects.

Game Engine Selection

Unreal Engine 4 (UE4)

Why this game engine?

The Unreal Engine 4 has been chosen for this project because it is a powerful engine both technically with its Blueprint visual scripting and visually with its advanced rendering and texturing techniques. Also UE4 is free to download and start developing on making it perfect for a solo project. Another reason for using UE4 is the prior knowledge of the engine and the confidence in blueprinting and texturing built up in previous projects.

Camera

One of Mirror's main focuses is to really immerse the player in the game world and engage them with the main character and his quest. The game could quite happily sport a 3rd person camera like Uncharted 4 (Uncharted, 2016) but this would not immerse the player within the world as much as a 1st person view. This way the player will feel like they are there and will experience the world from the eyes of the character. For the view in the glass a camera will be used at the same eye height as the player so they will see into the alternate dimension as if they were actually there.

Overview

The camera will be from a first person perspective to really engage the player with the game world and characters experiences.

Camera Detail

When the player looks into the glass while standing in a place where in the alternate time zone the view is blocked, like in a door way where the door is closed in the opposite time the view will become distorted and fuzzy. Also at all times this glass will have a slight vignette with some distortion and discoloration to make the player feel like they are looking through a mystical glass into the other time zone. When the player switches dimension the screen will flash quickly giving the feel of travel without taking away from the seamless aspect by using an elaborate animation or effect.

The Game World Research & Design

Overview

The game world consists of two main time zones one being in the 1900's with grand buildings and objects typically found in the upper-class sections of the time. The other time zone is in the present day and is an untouched version of the past with the usual wear and tear that comes with age. Visually the present will be completely different, the world will be run down with things like torn wallpaper, broken furniture and holes in the walls. But the layout and contents of these time zones will be identical making the game mechanic fun and interesting to use. Levels are laid out in a linear fashion with lots of different puzzles which make use of the main game mechanic.

The Physical World

Overview

The game starts in a mansion which was built in the early 1900's for a very wealthy family and the player will be able to access the hallway, dining room, butler pen, toilet, drawing room, staircase and master bedroom. The mansion will follow all of the design features of the time and will really feel like it is from the time. The player will be able to freely travel between this and the run down version so they can get a good feel for the world and the game mechanic.

Key Locations

- The Past/Mansion – The main environment for this project with grand architecture and design which will be very visually pleasing to the player. This environment will also provide a lot of gameplay opportunities with the time travelling mechanic and will allow for a lot of in depth puzzles. This location will be very vibrant with warm colours that really invite the player and make them feel like they are welcome.
- The Present/Mansion – This will be a run down version of the past but will keep the same layout. This environment will be broken down with holes in the architecture allowing the player to maybe get to places they cannot in the past. This location will be dull with toned down, warm colours and surfaces to make it feel abandoned and untouched.

Travel

The player will travel on foot throughout the levels and will be able to jump to reach higher places. The main game mechanic allows the player to travel between the two time zones. They do this by first looking through the glass into the other time and then stepping through, the player is able to do this freely with no limitations.

The World Layout Research & Design

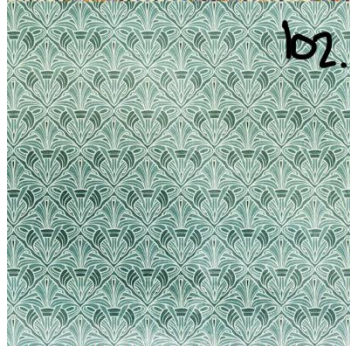

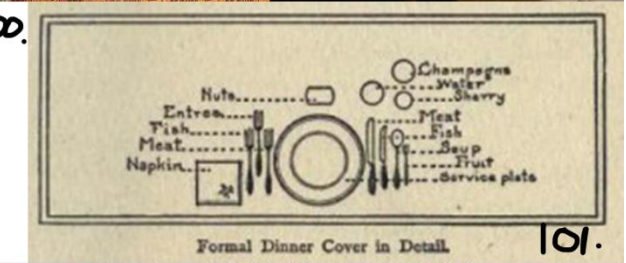

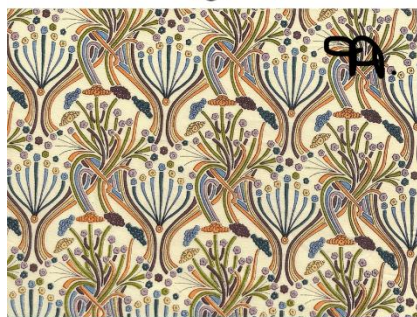

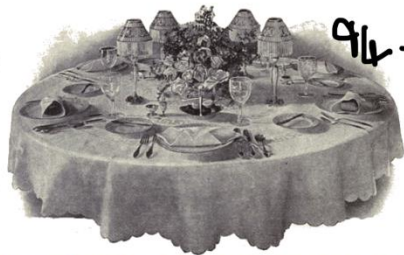

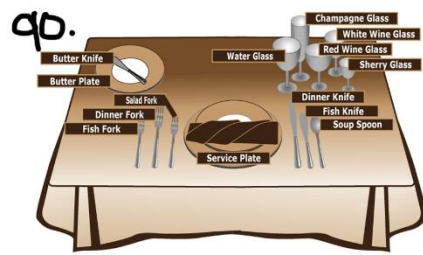

To start designing for the level a lot of early 1900 architecture known as 'art nouveau' was explored from interior decoration to floor plans of the mansions from the time. A lot of inspiration was also taken from the Titanic as this was built in the early 1900's and was at the height of luxury. Also due to the limitation of the time there are not many detailed photographs, any are blurry and black and white so the Titanic film (Titanic, 1997) provides a very good representation of design at the time. Also games sharing a similar theme will be drawn from like Uncharted 4 (Uncharted, 2016).

With the research above these concepts for what the interior of the dining room will look like were created, staying true to the time the game's set in.

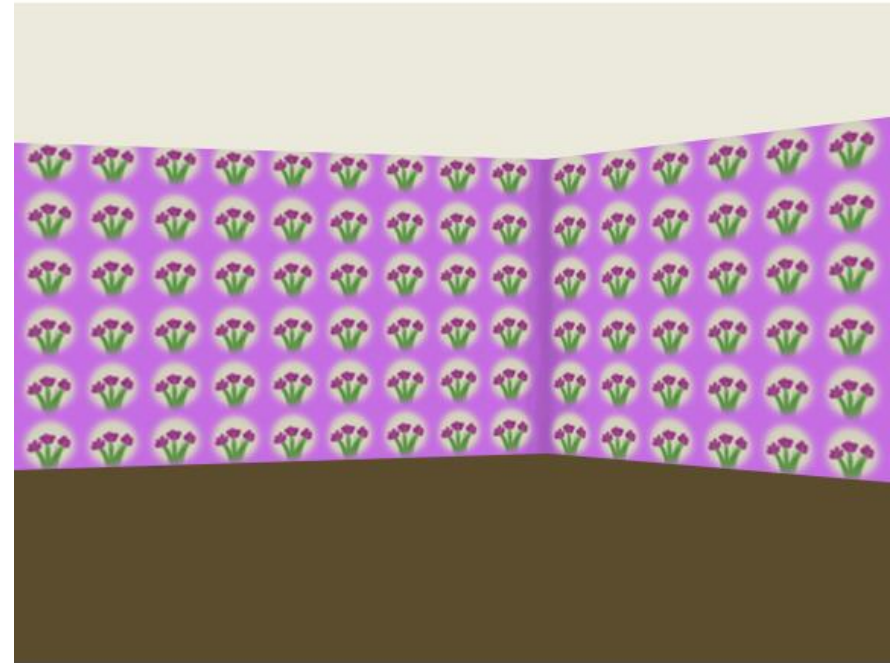

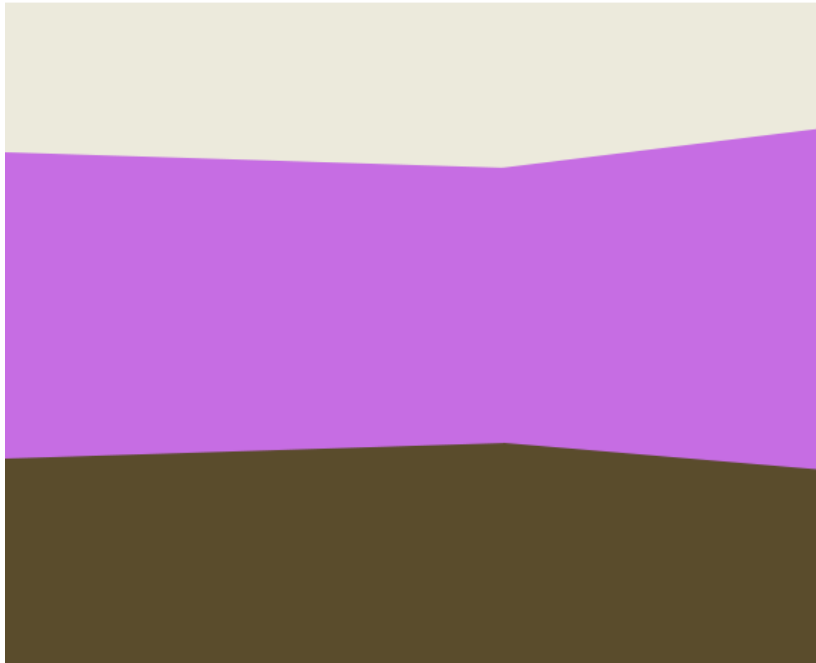

Below is a concept for the dining room table and follows the style that all of the furniture will take on, with its ornate features and dark oak wood.

Based upon all of the research and designs a final concept for what the dining room will look like was created.

These are the designs for the drawing room including the morse code machine for one of the puzzles within the game. All of these draw from the research above to make sure they are historically correct.

Once the initial sketches and research were done a final design for the drawing room was completed.

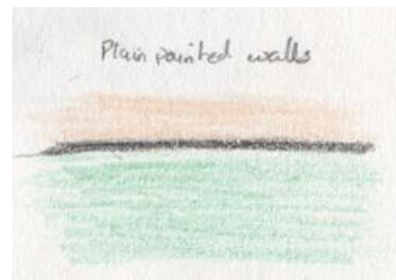

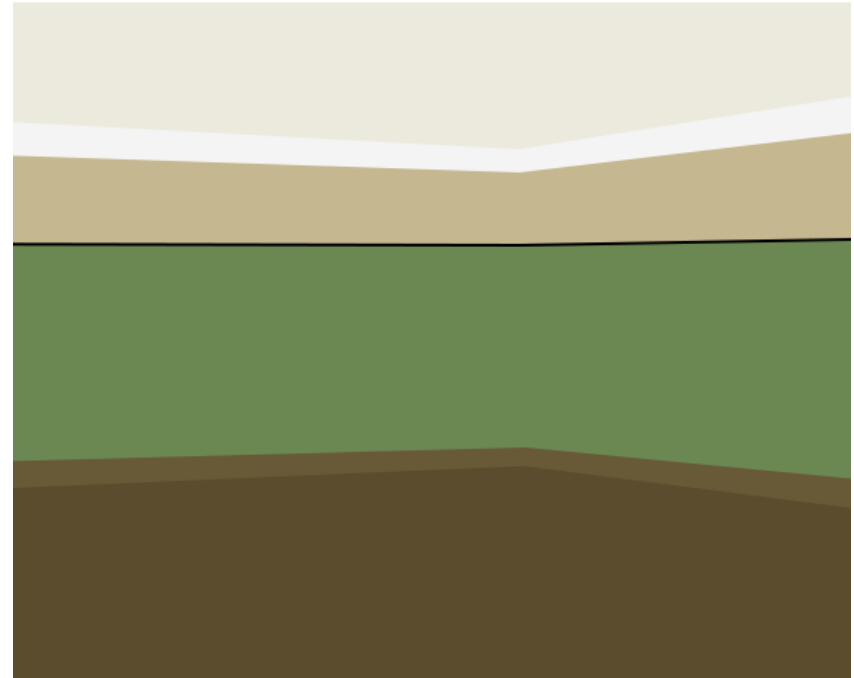

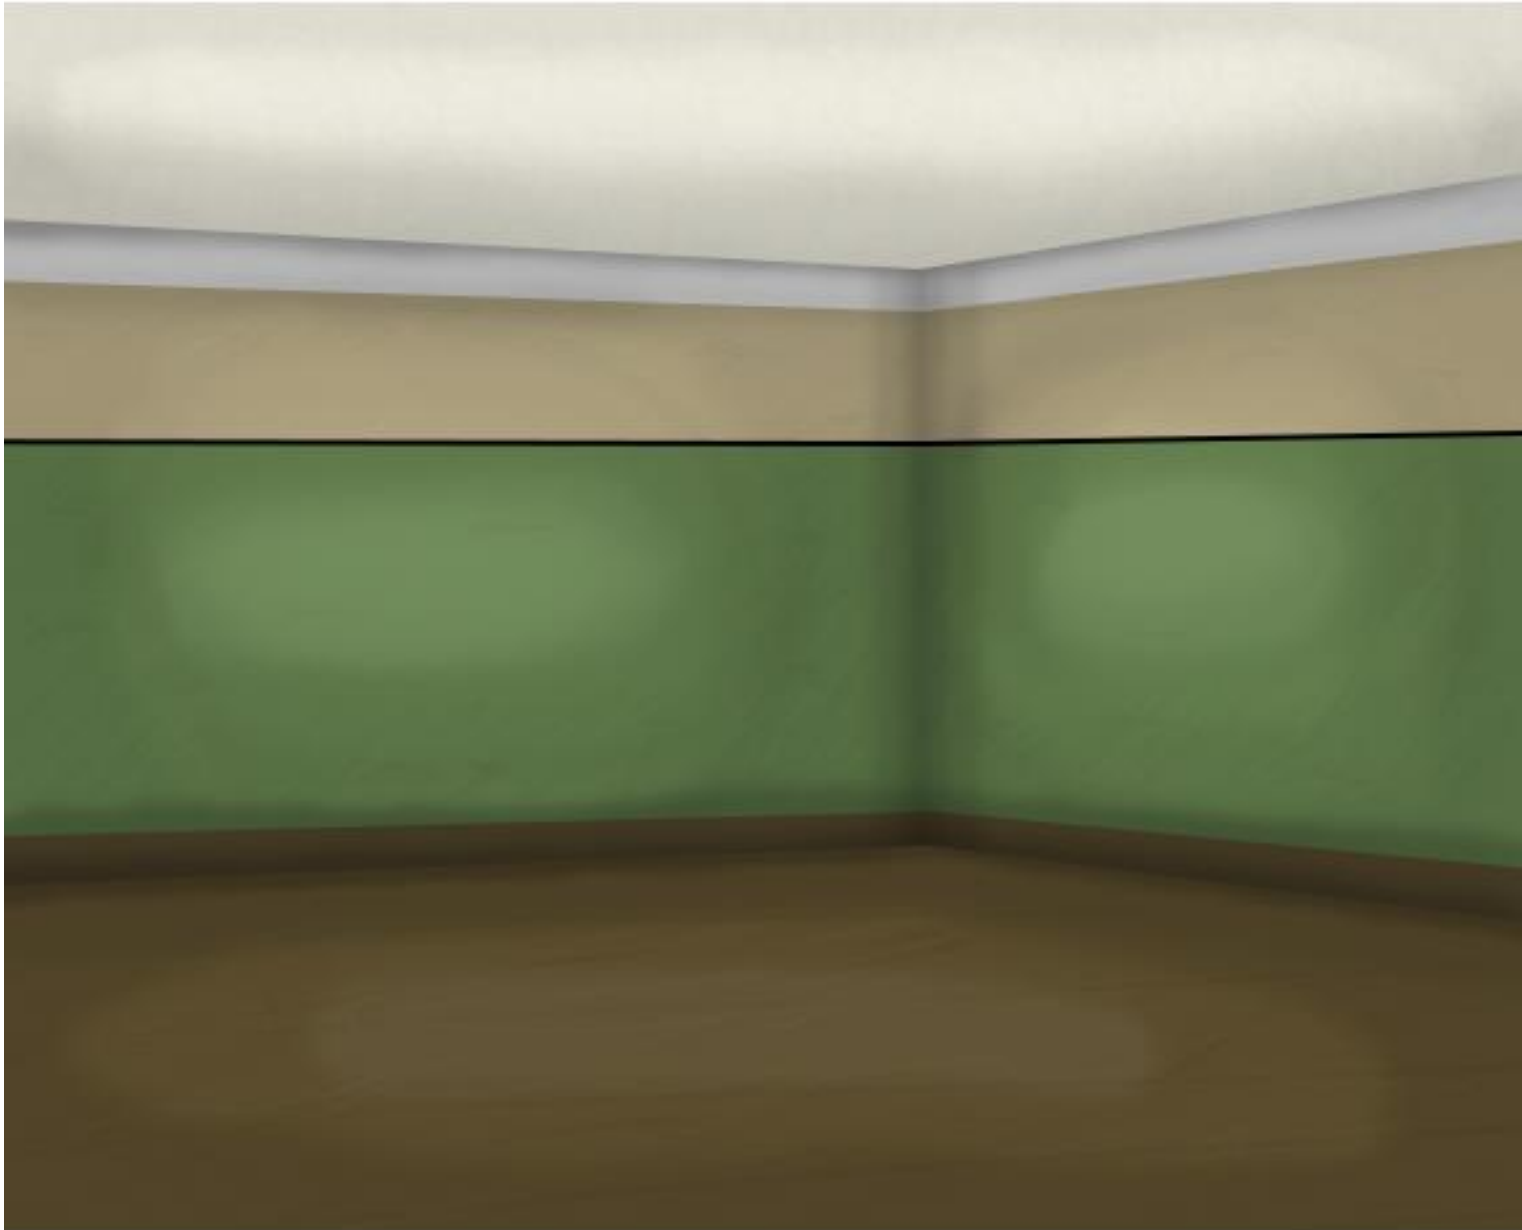

Here are the designs for the butlers pen which will be gated off from the player, this where the player will steal the key from the butler who will be sleeping up the gate. Again these designs are influenced from the above research to make sure they look like they are really from the 1900's.

Using these designs and research this final design for the butler's pen was created.

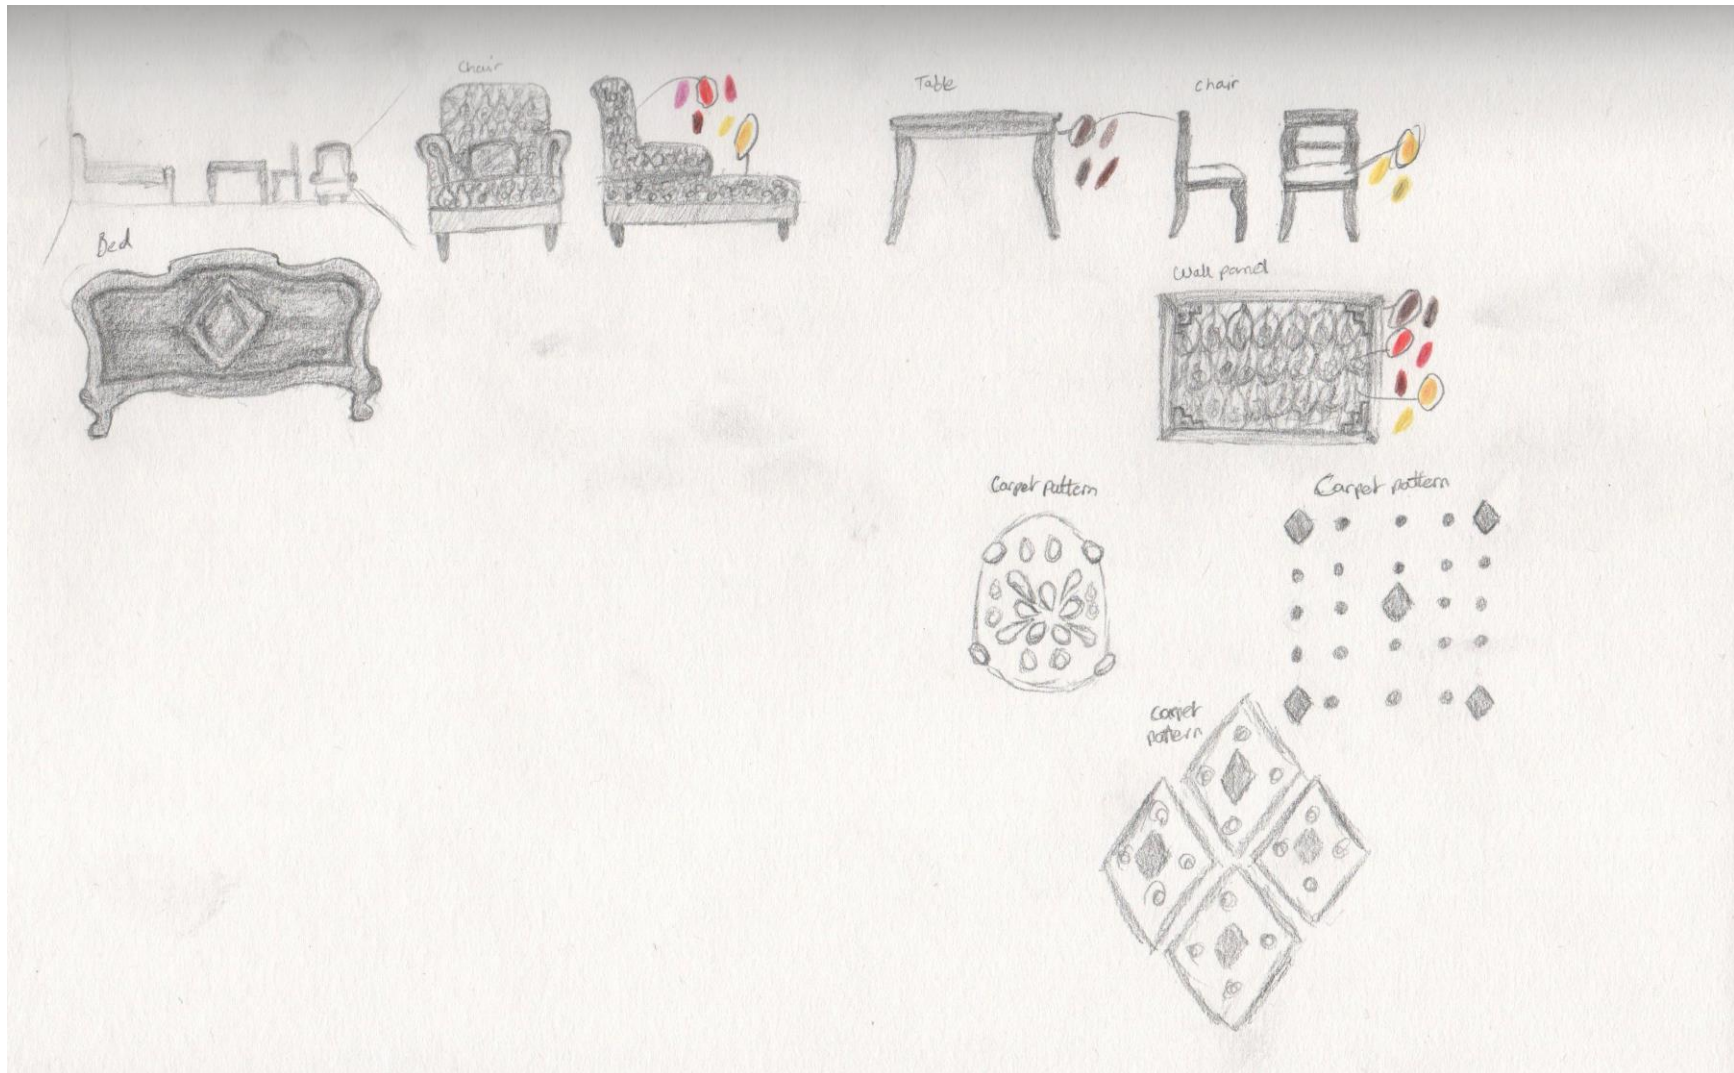

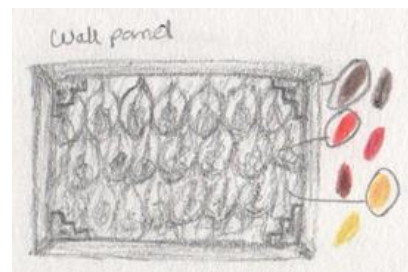

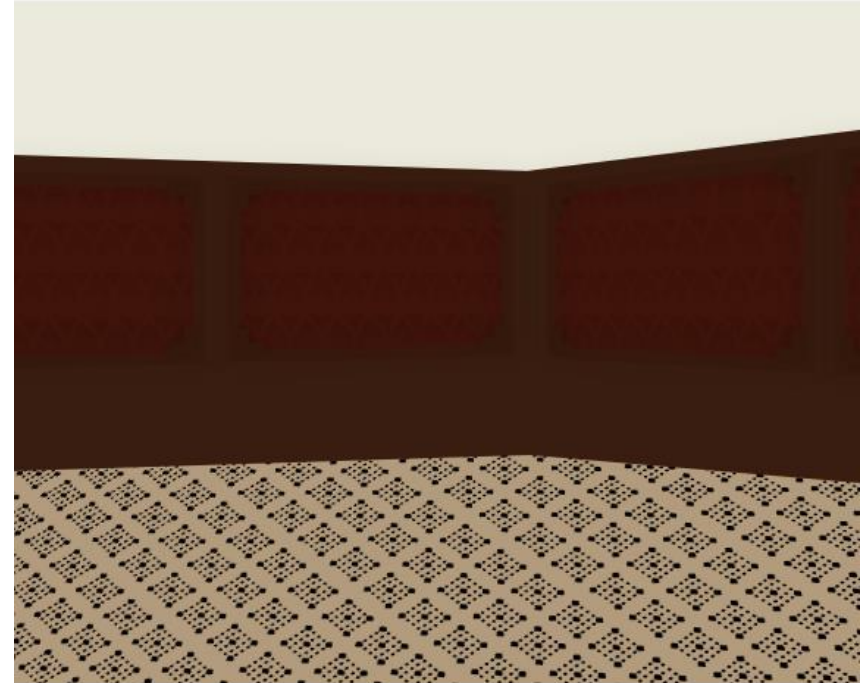

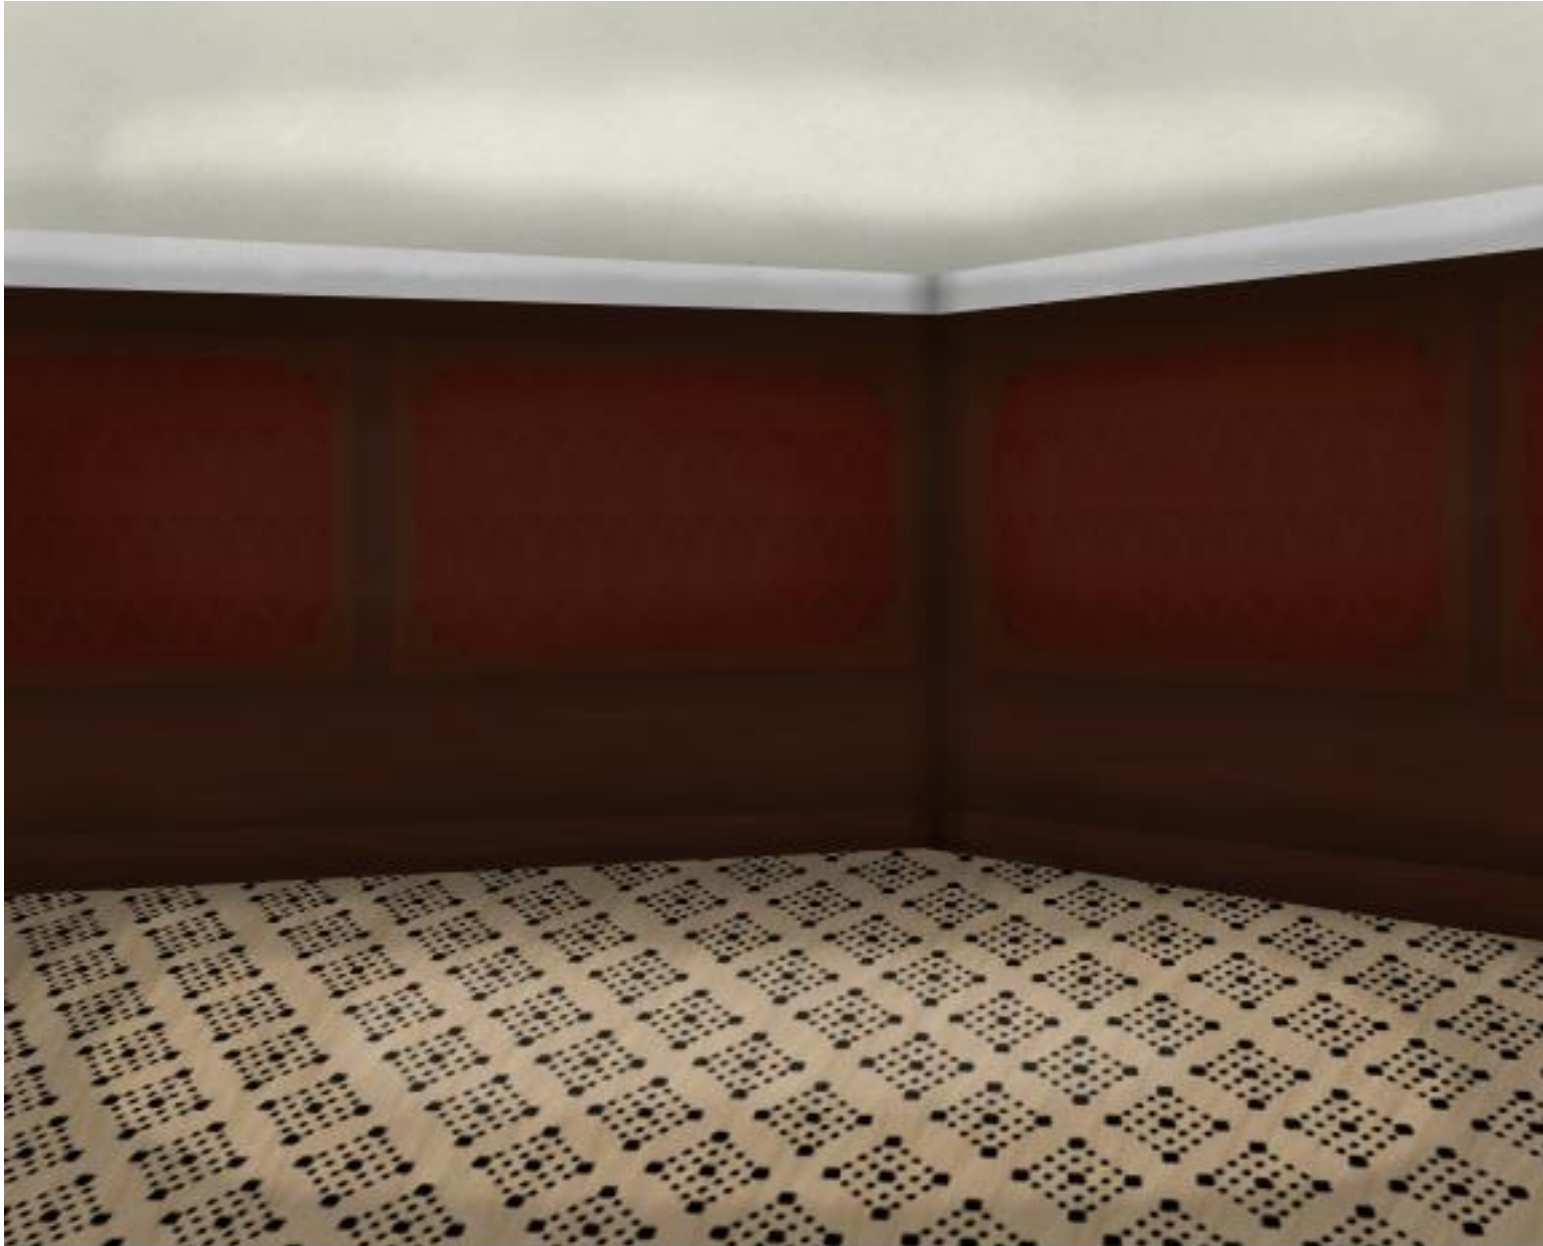

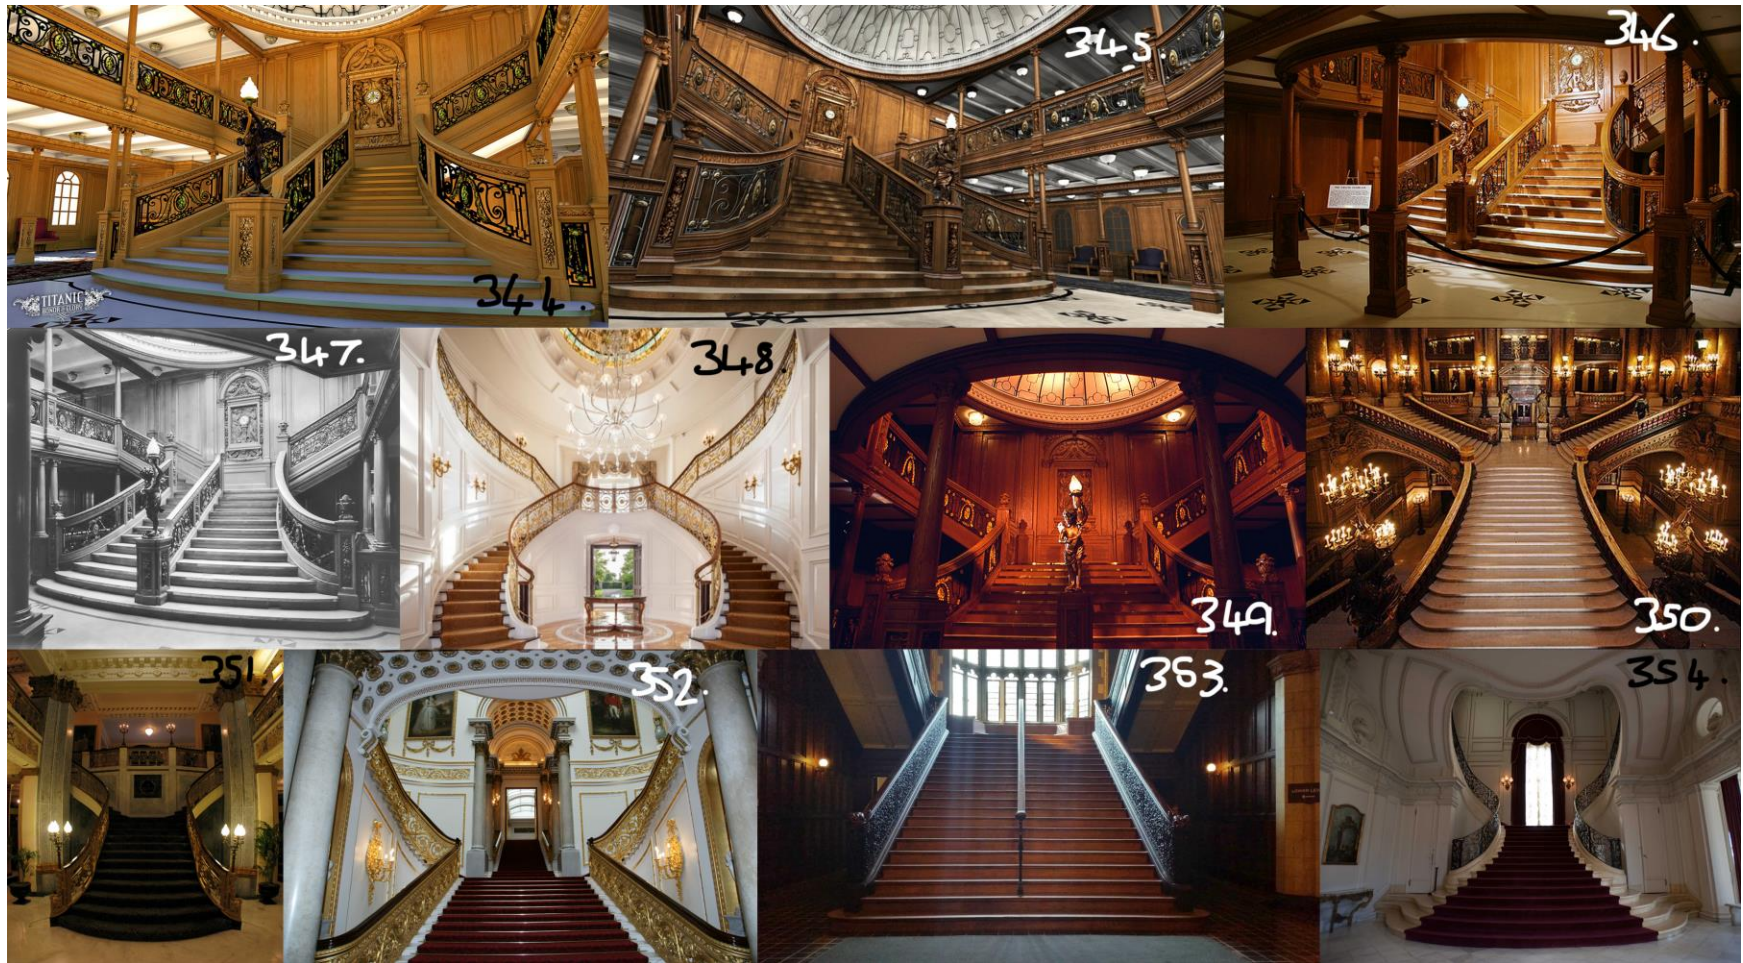

Below are the designs for the master bedroom where the player will find the locked chest at the end of the level. All of the above research was used to make sure these designs are fitting and don't stray from the aesthetic of the time.

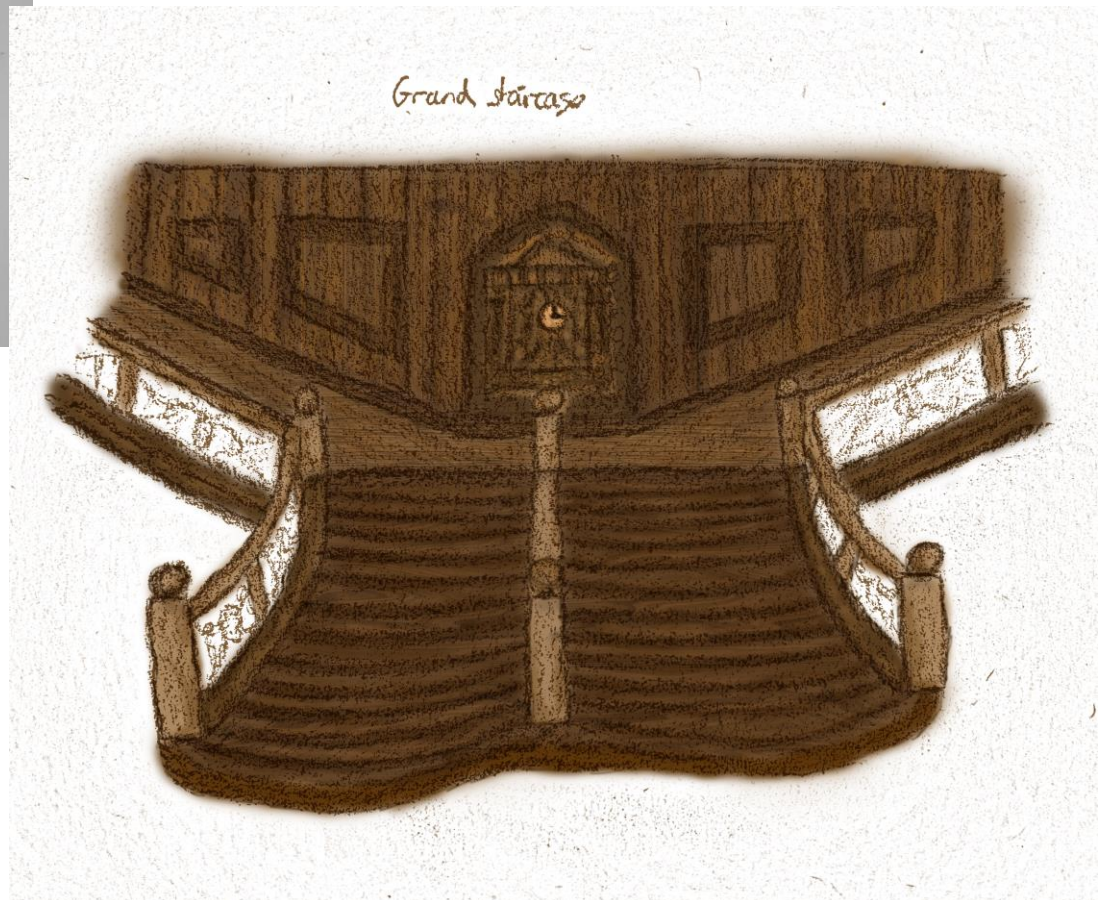

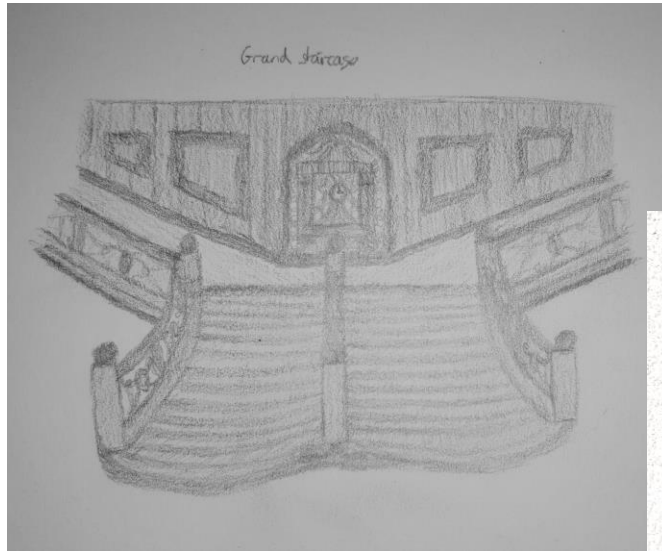

Below is the final design for the bedroom which draws from all of the research and design conducted above to stay true to the 1900's time zone.

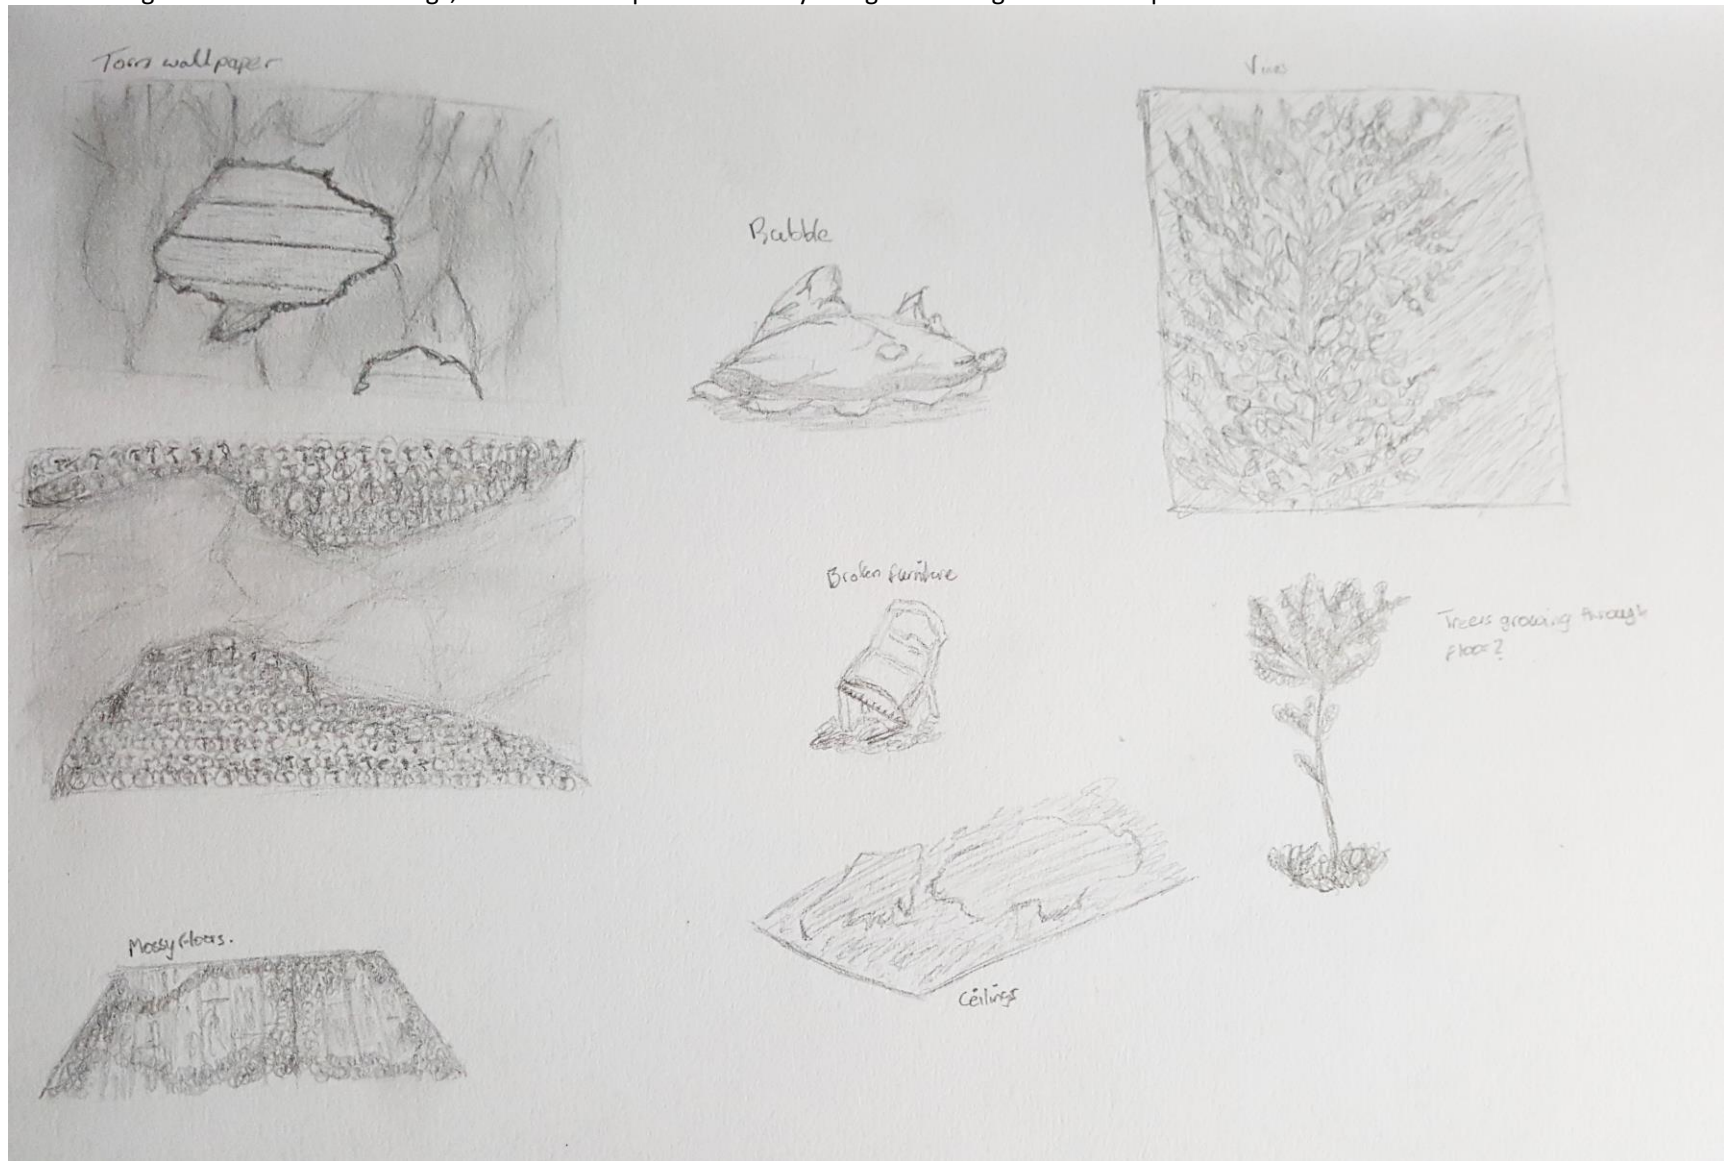

Below are some designs for the main grand staircase in the game, these are based off of staircases from outstanding buildings of the time.

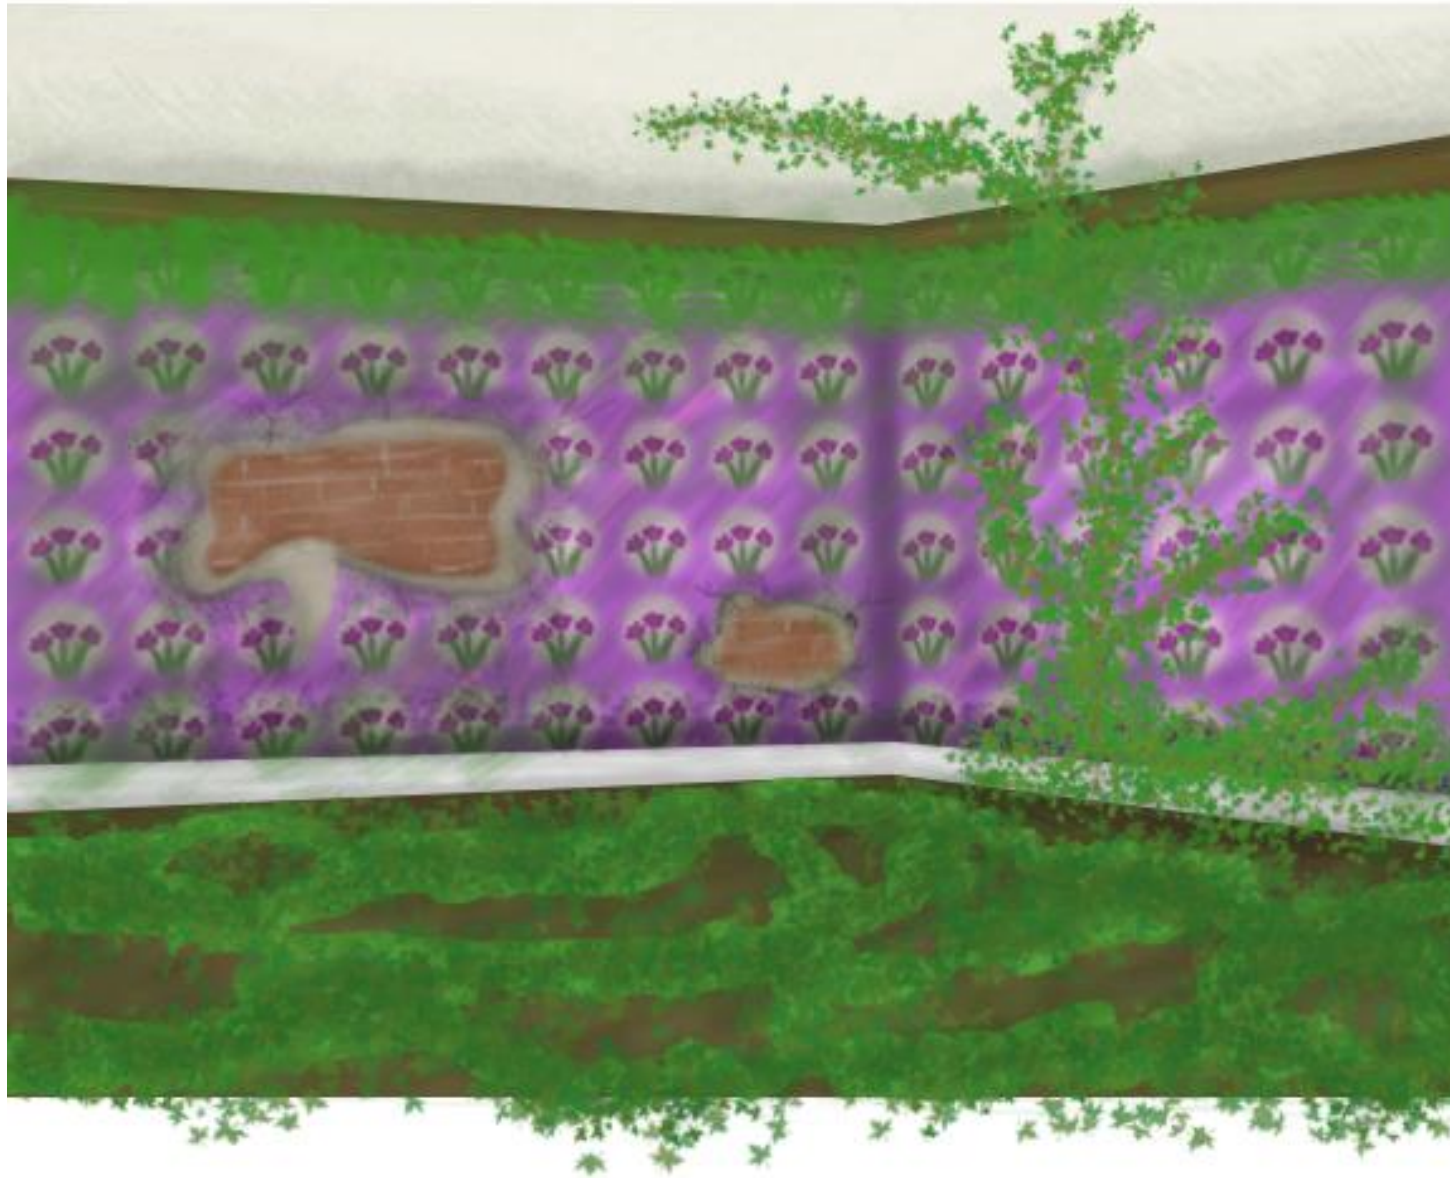

After looking into abandoned buildings, sketches were produced to try and get a feeling for how the present will look in Mirror.

After producing these sketches a design for the dining room table was taken and a design for the broken down version was created.

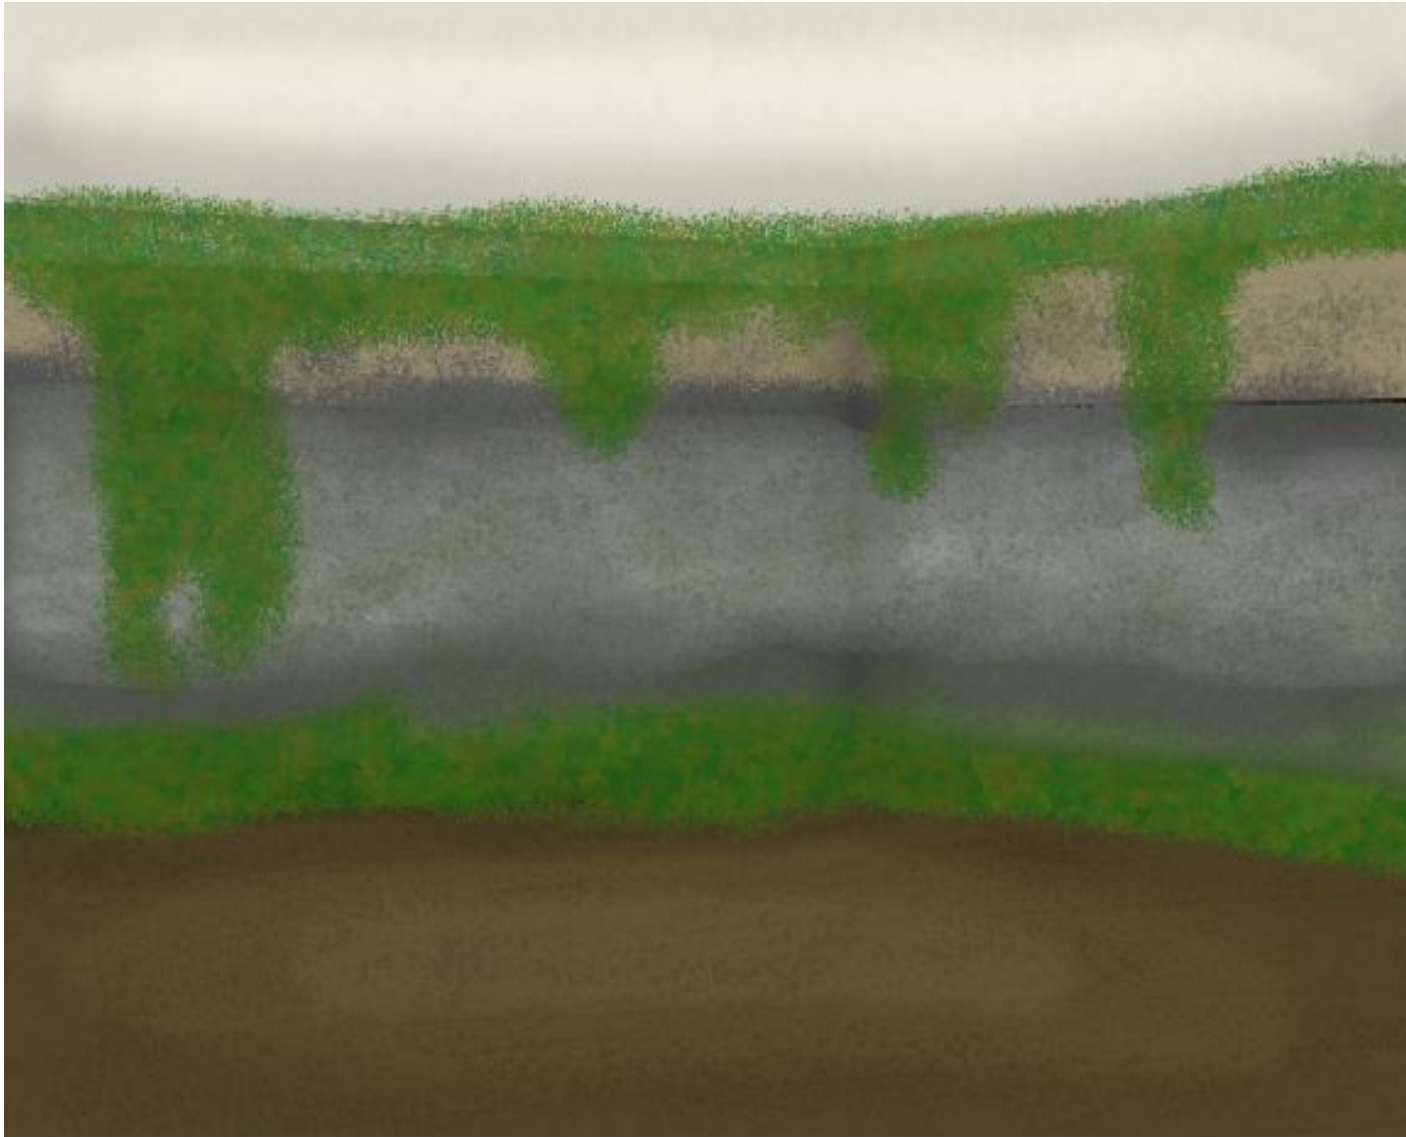

Below is a final concept for the broken down dining room for the present.

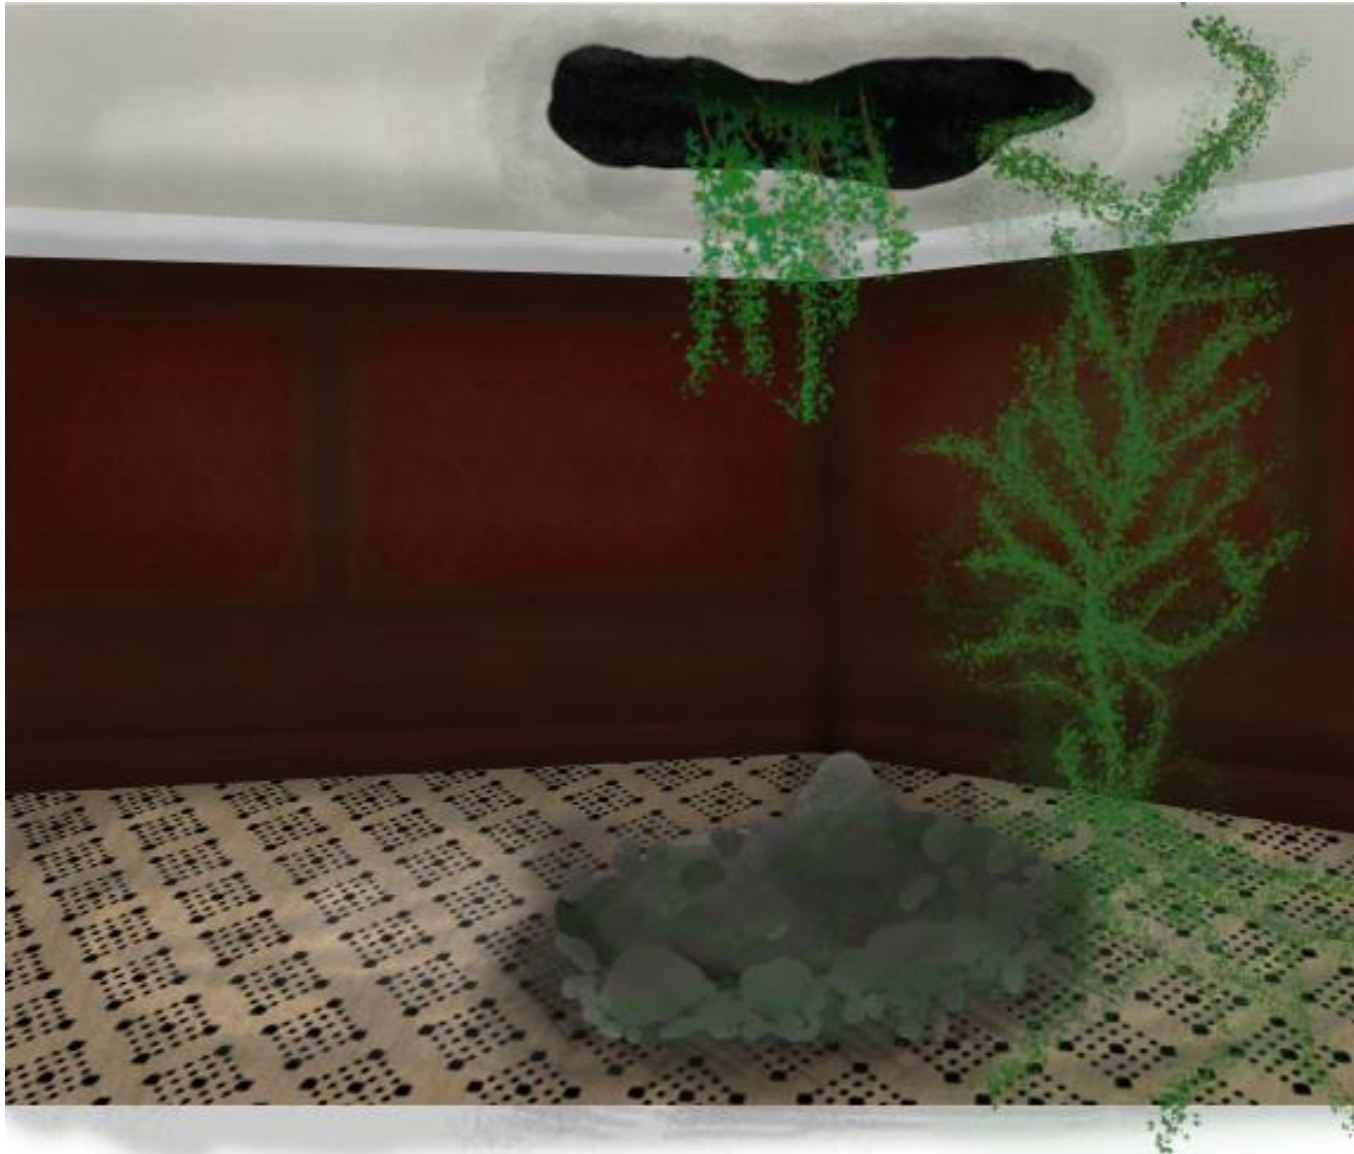

Here is the final design for the broken down version of the drawing room.

This is the final design for present version of the butler's pen.

Finally a broken down version of the master bedroom was created.

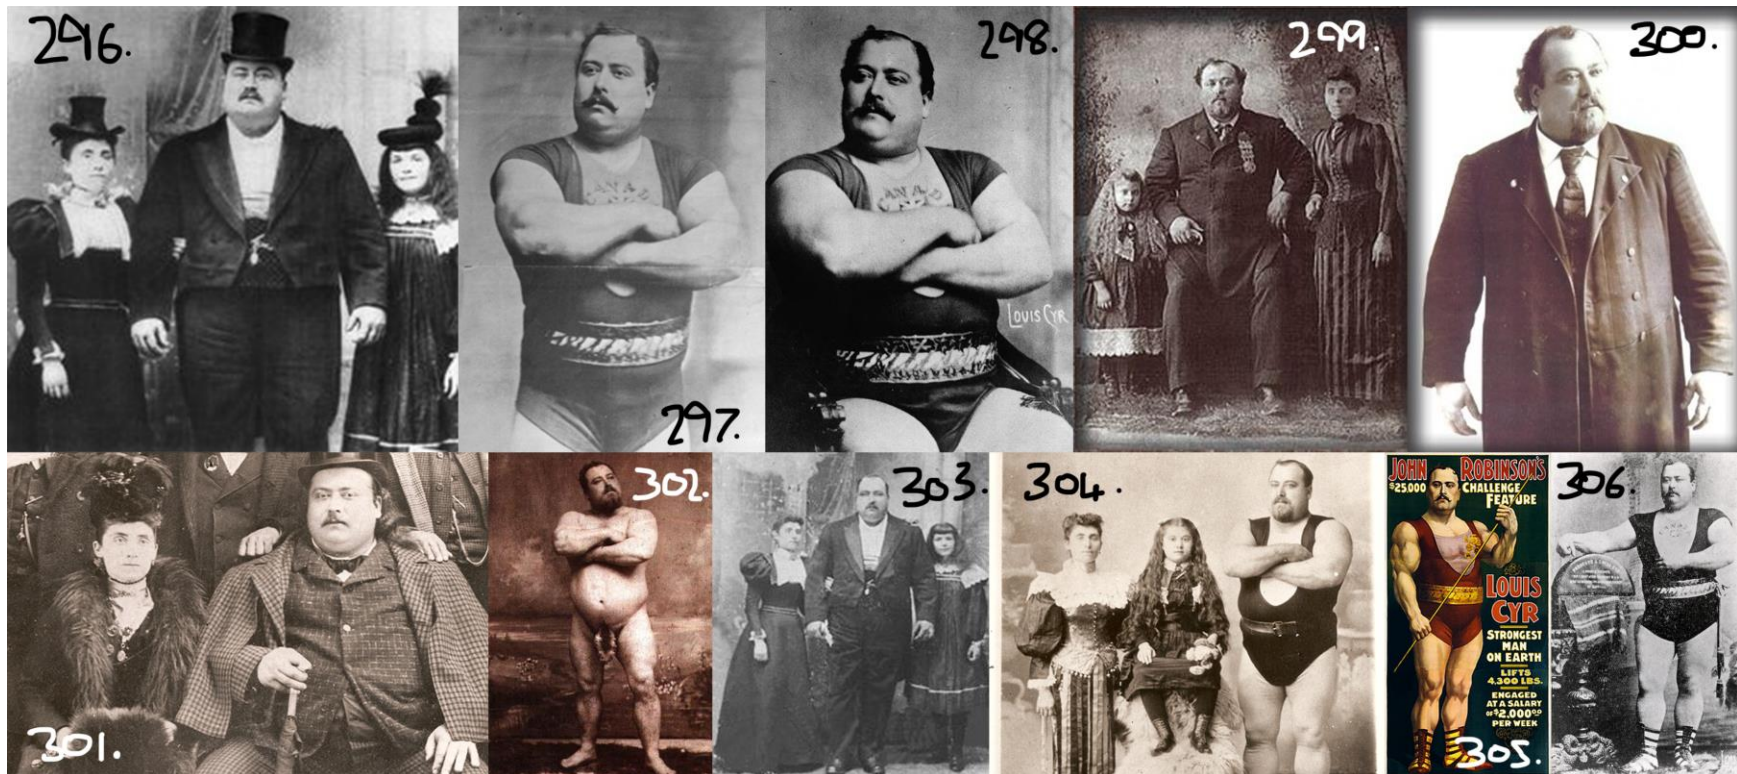

Game Characters Research & Design

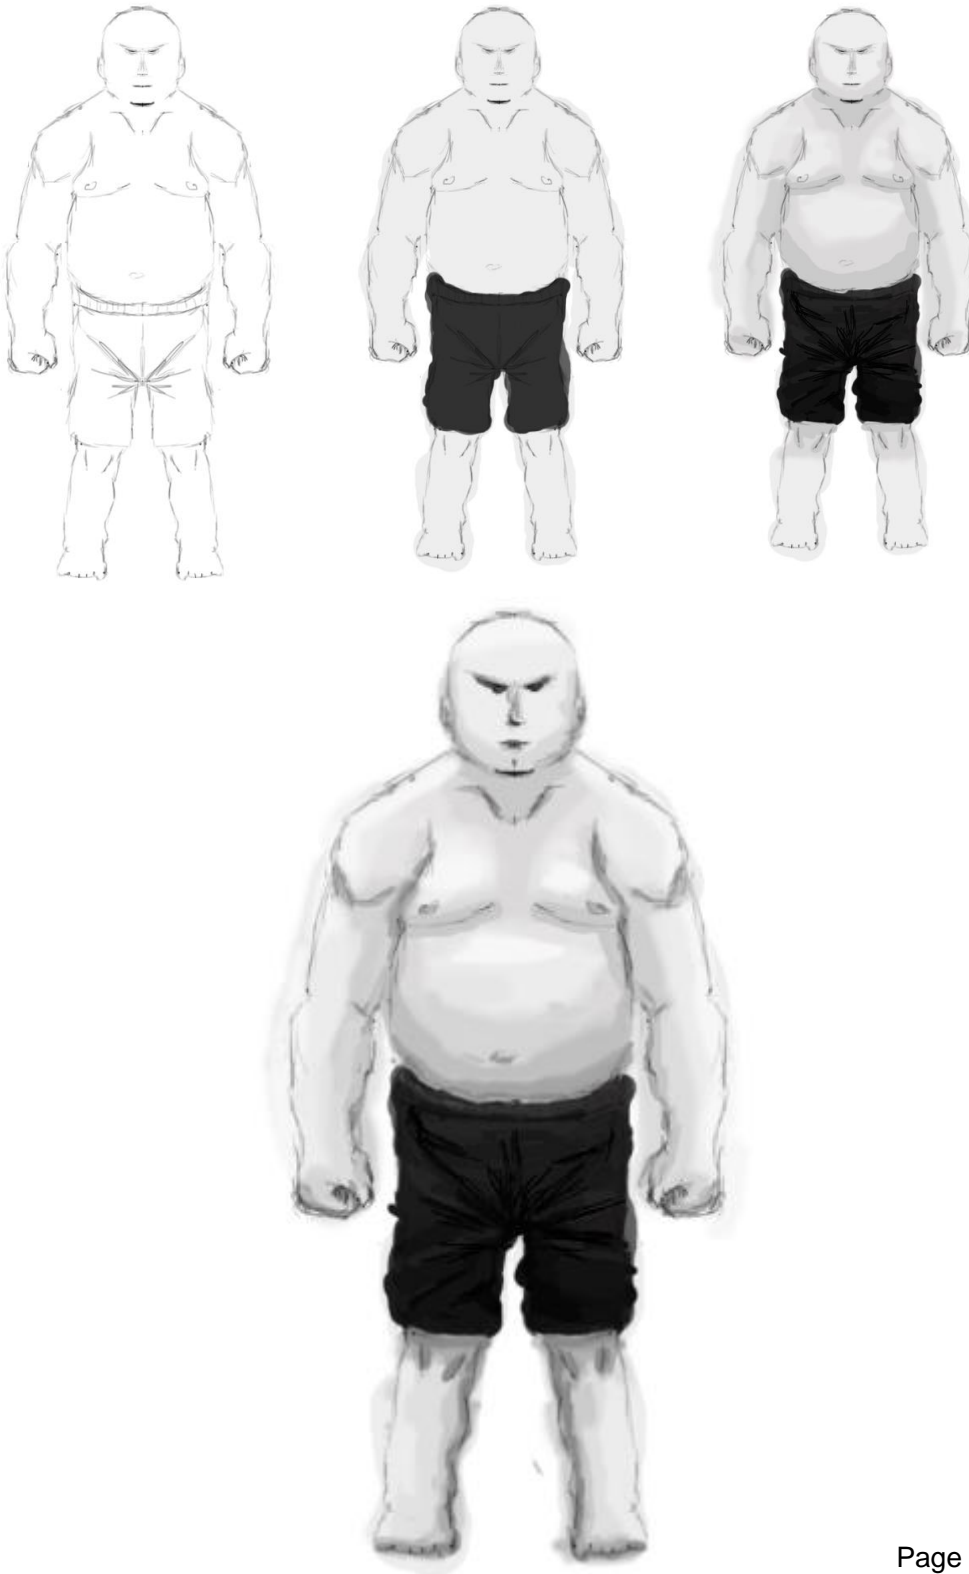

Character #1

The player will see the world from a first person view and therefore won't be able to see the character they are playing as. So there is only one character in Mirror, the butler/guard that the player steals a key off to get into the master bedroom.

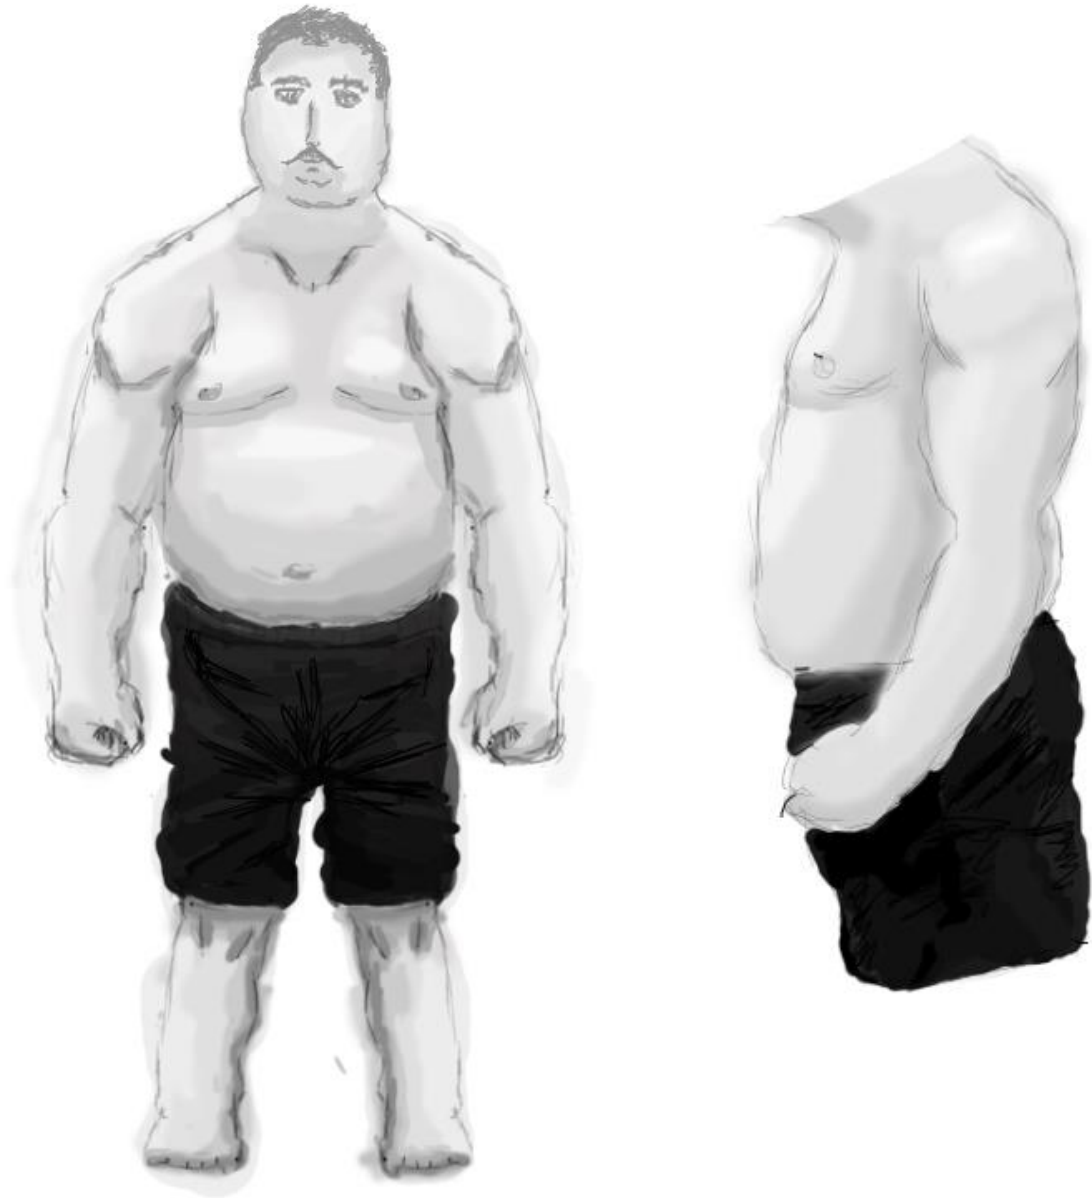

The main inspiration for the butler/guard is Louis Cyr who was a circus strongman in the early 1900's.

Below is the first design for the butler in just his shorts as he is asleep within the game world. The butler is quite buff as he also acts as the security guard of the house.

Looking at the people at the time the head on the first character design just didn't fit in, therefore a more fitting head was created.

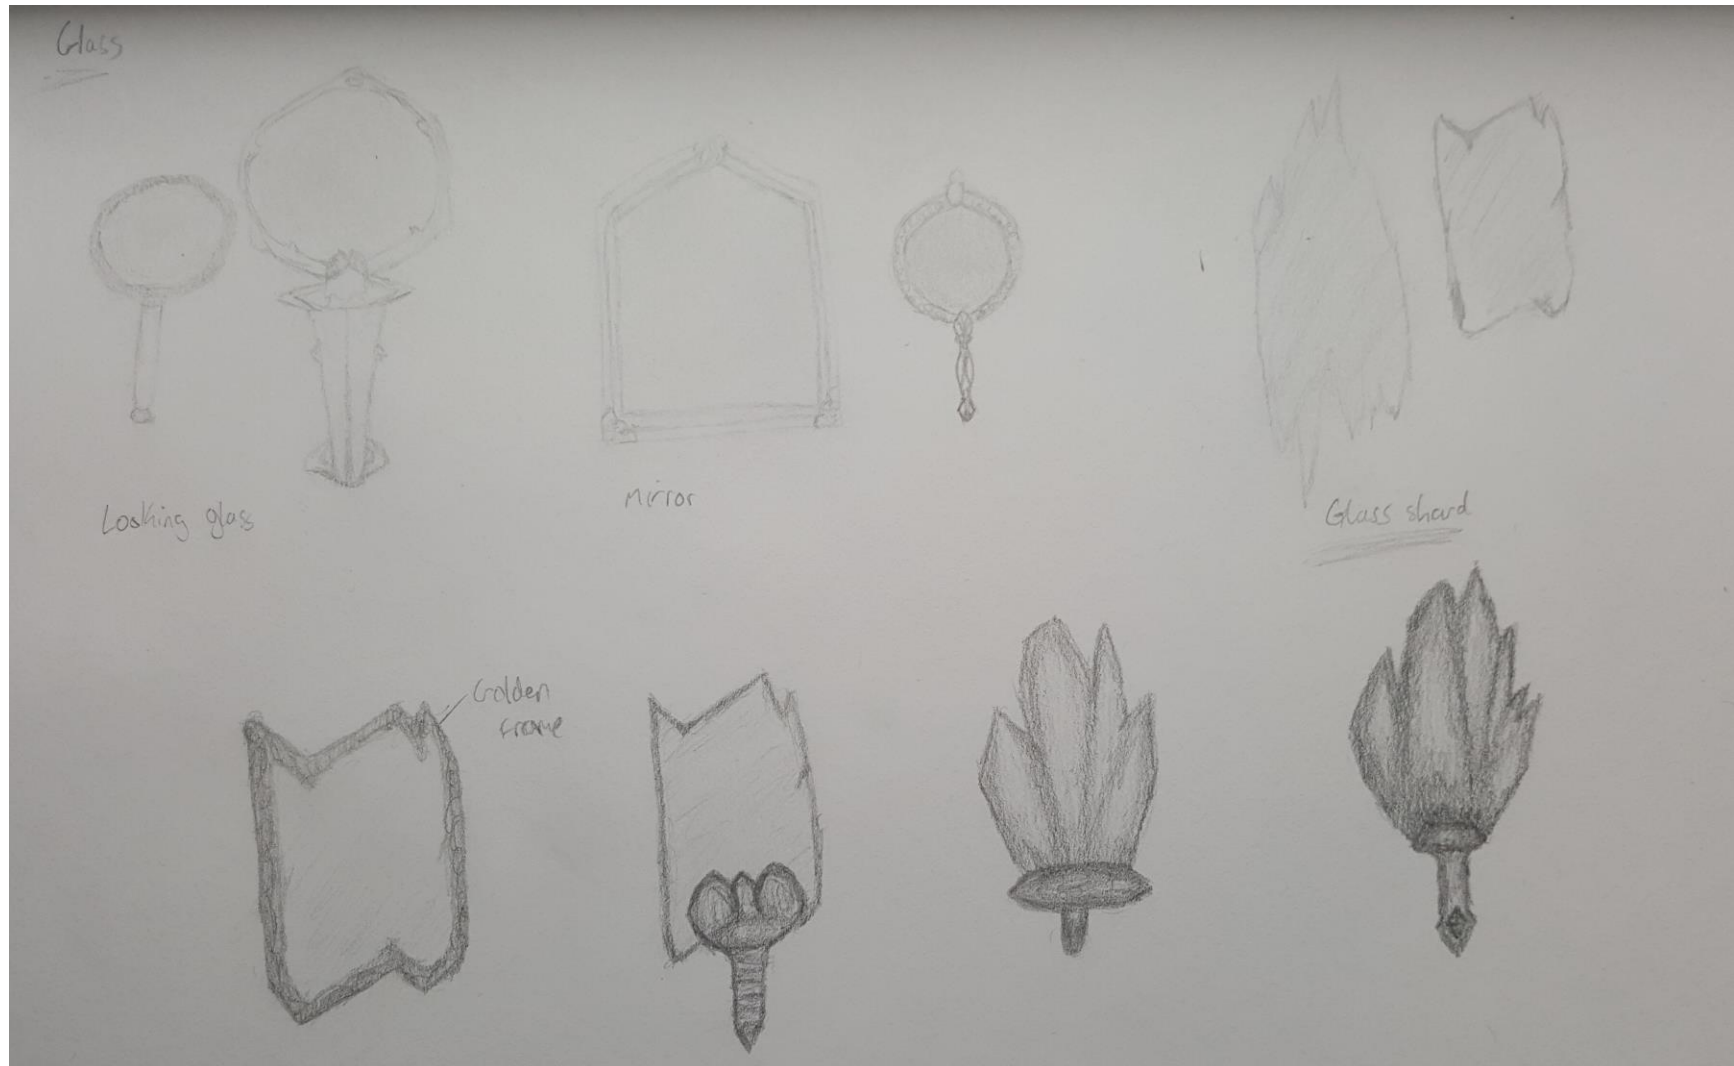

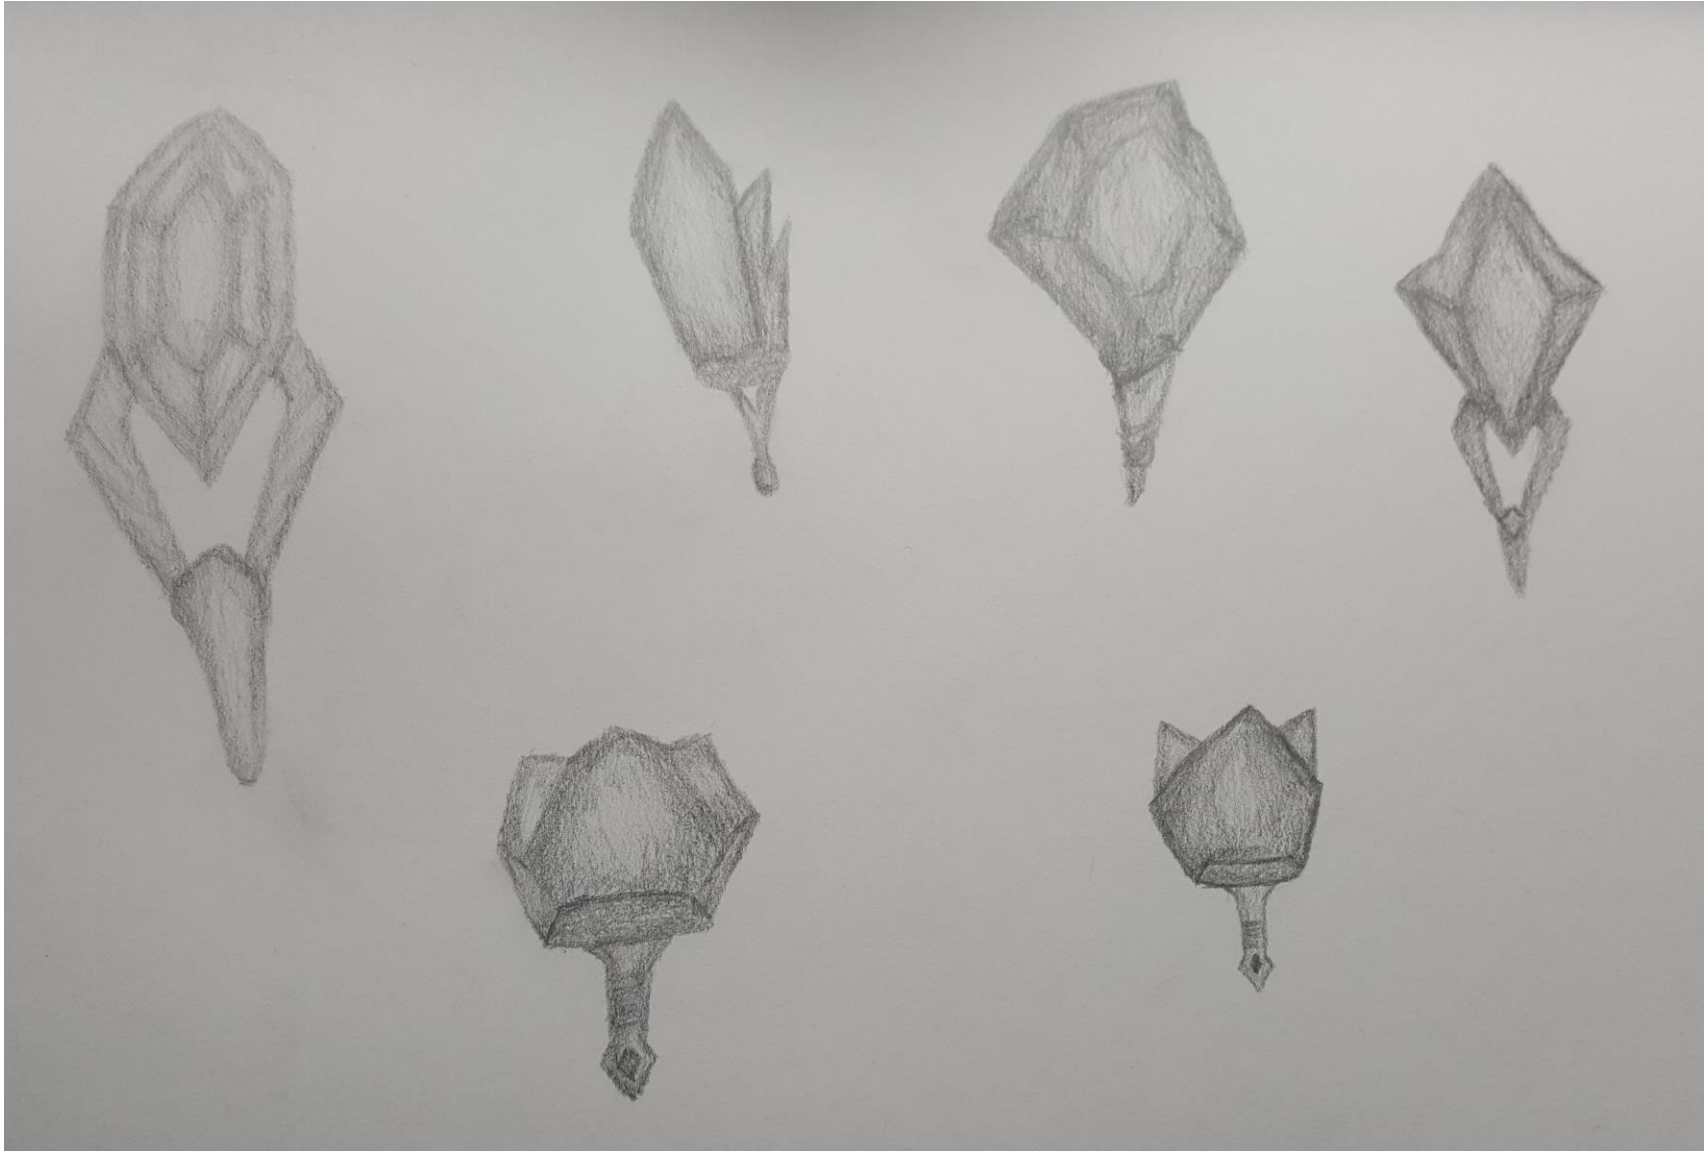

Other Game Art Research & Design

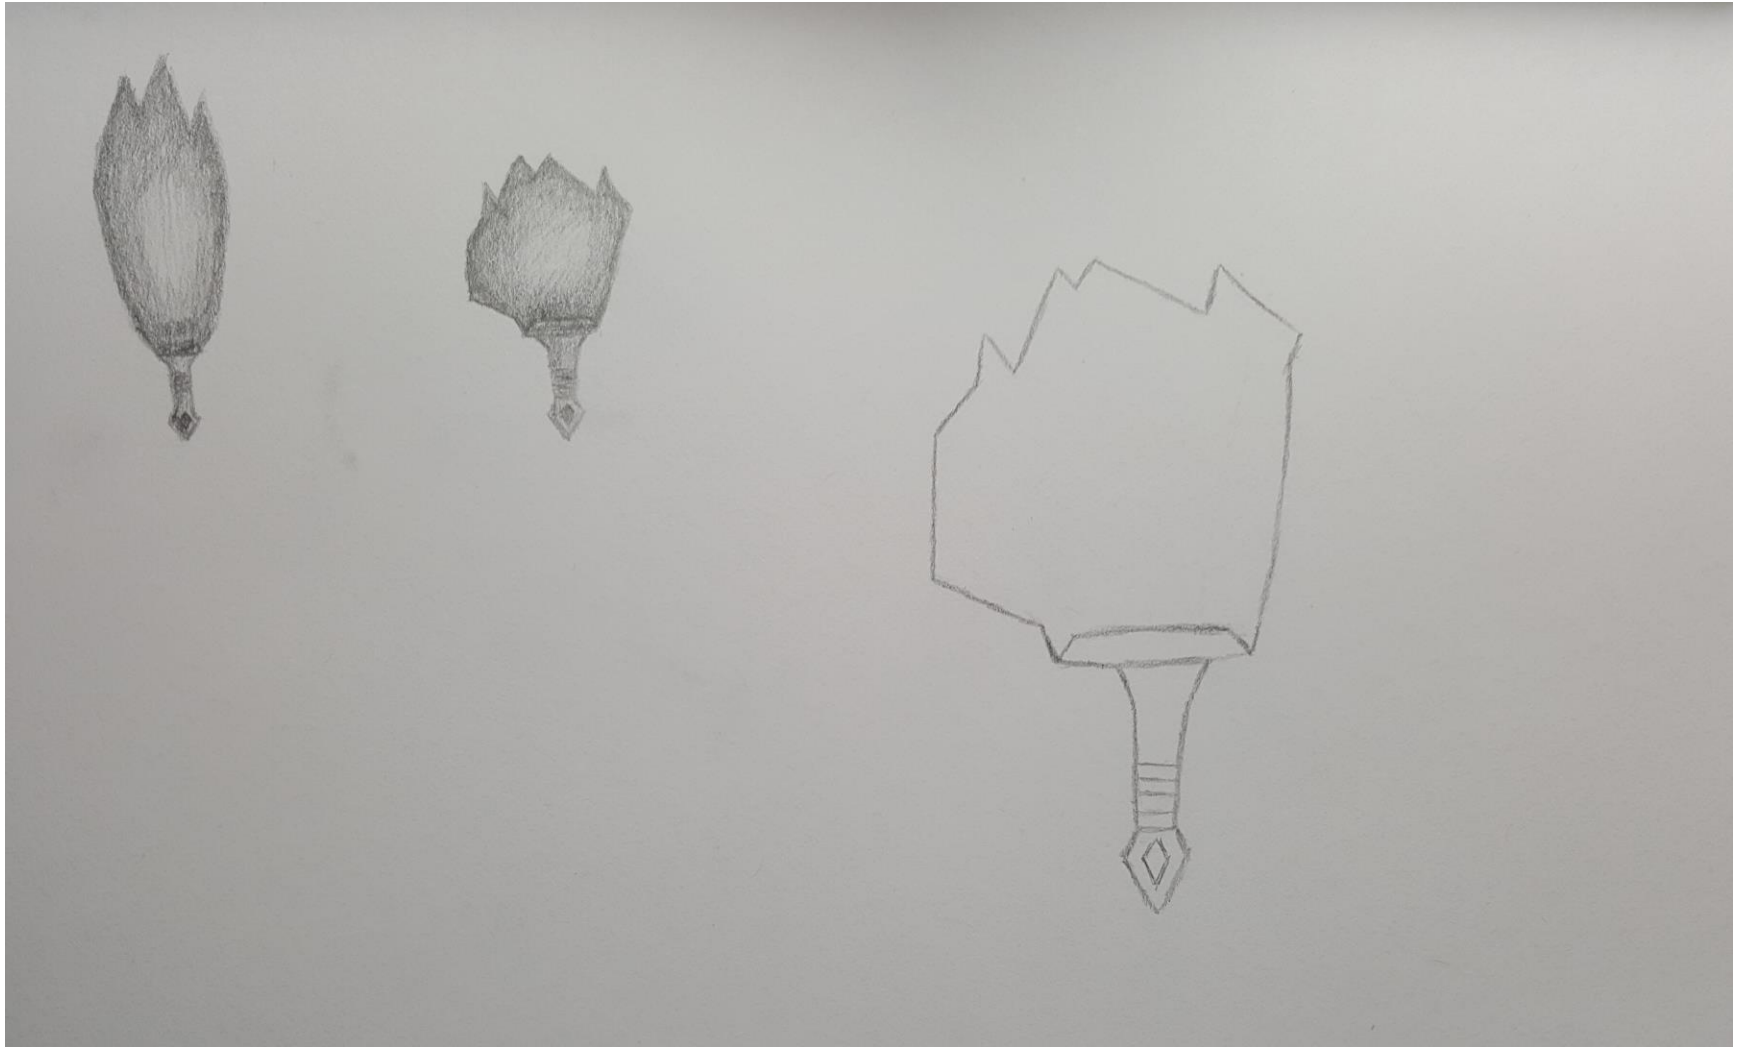

Glass

The glass is what the player will use to see into and switch between the two time zones. The idea behind this glass was to make something that looked ordinary, something any normal person would throw away until it got into the right hands and lit up with magic. Therefore the idea of a glass or gem object was taken and using the research above a lot of designs were created to get the perfect aesthetic.

To start the final design the basic shape of the glass was taken and layers were built up on top to get the desired look using the research which has been gathered.

In these images different colours were being experimented with.

The final design for the glass with a deep purple colour scheme as this looks the most magical and has a pleasing aesthetic.

Interact able Objects

Movable Object

This what the player will unstick from the dining room and use to get over the broken staircase.

Once the initial research and design was complete for the movable object these final designs were created.

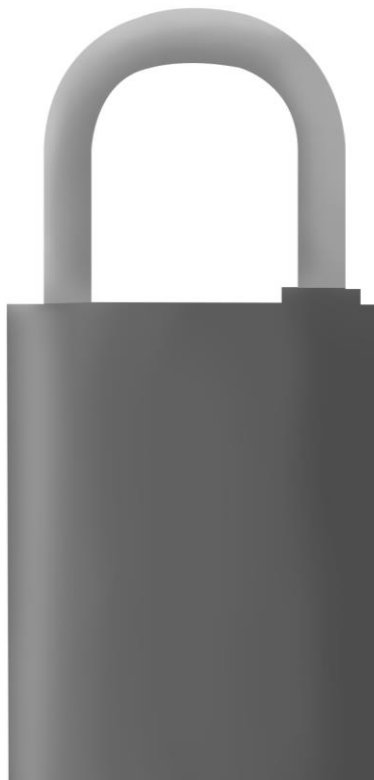

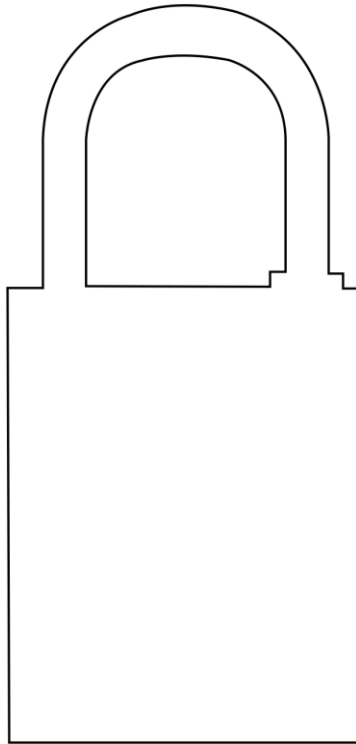

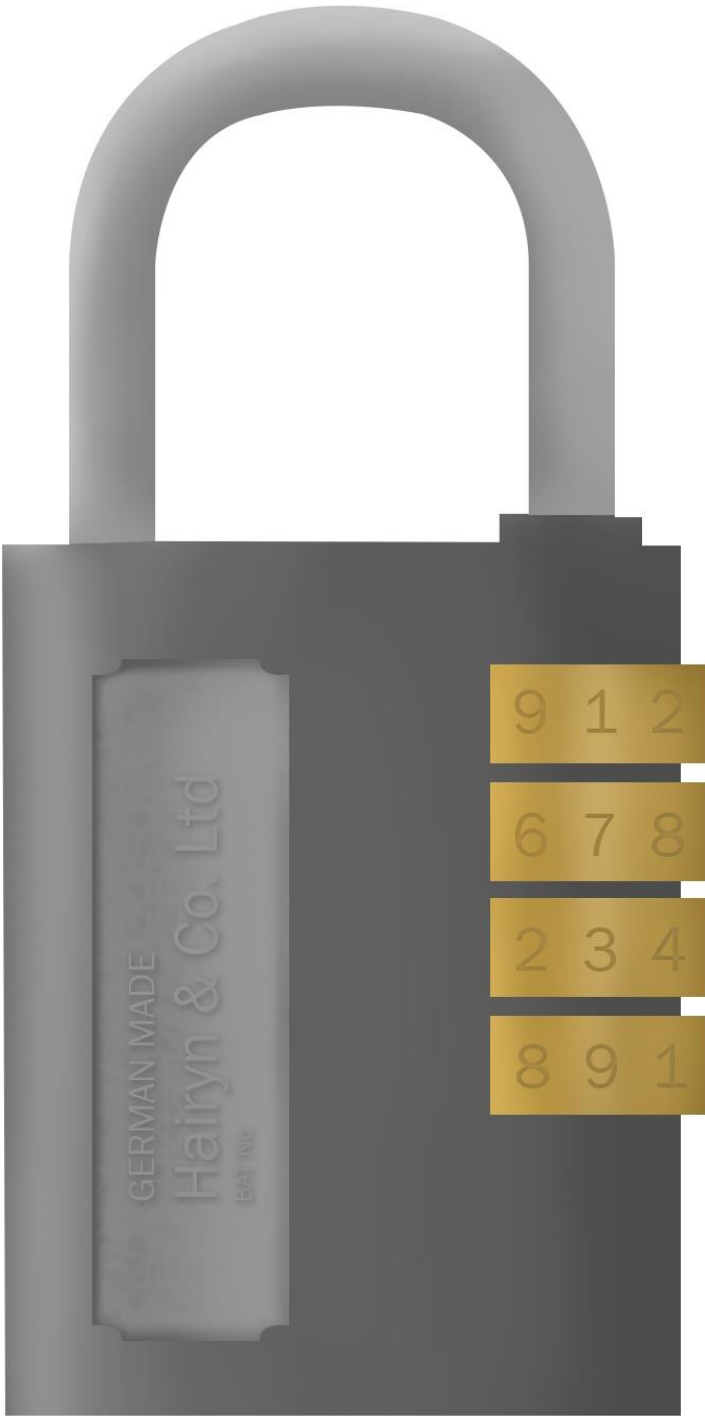

Combination Lock

This is the lock that the player must find the code for and unlock to get into the chest at the end of the level. Using this research of different locks from the early 1900's a few designs were created to find which one would be the most aesthetically pleasing but also the clearest to understand.

Below is the final design for the lock, this one was chosen because it is the most recognisable as a lock and is easier to understand with four separate distinguishable number wheels.

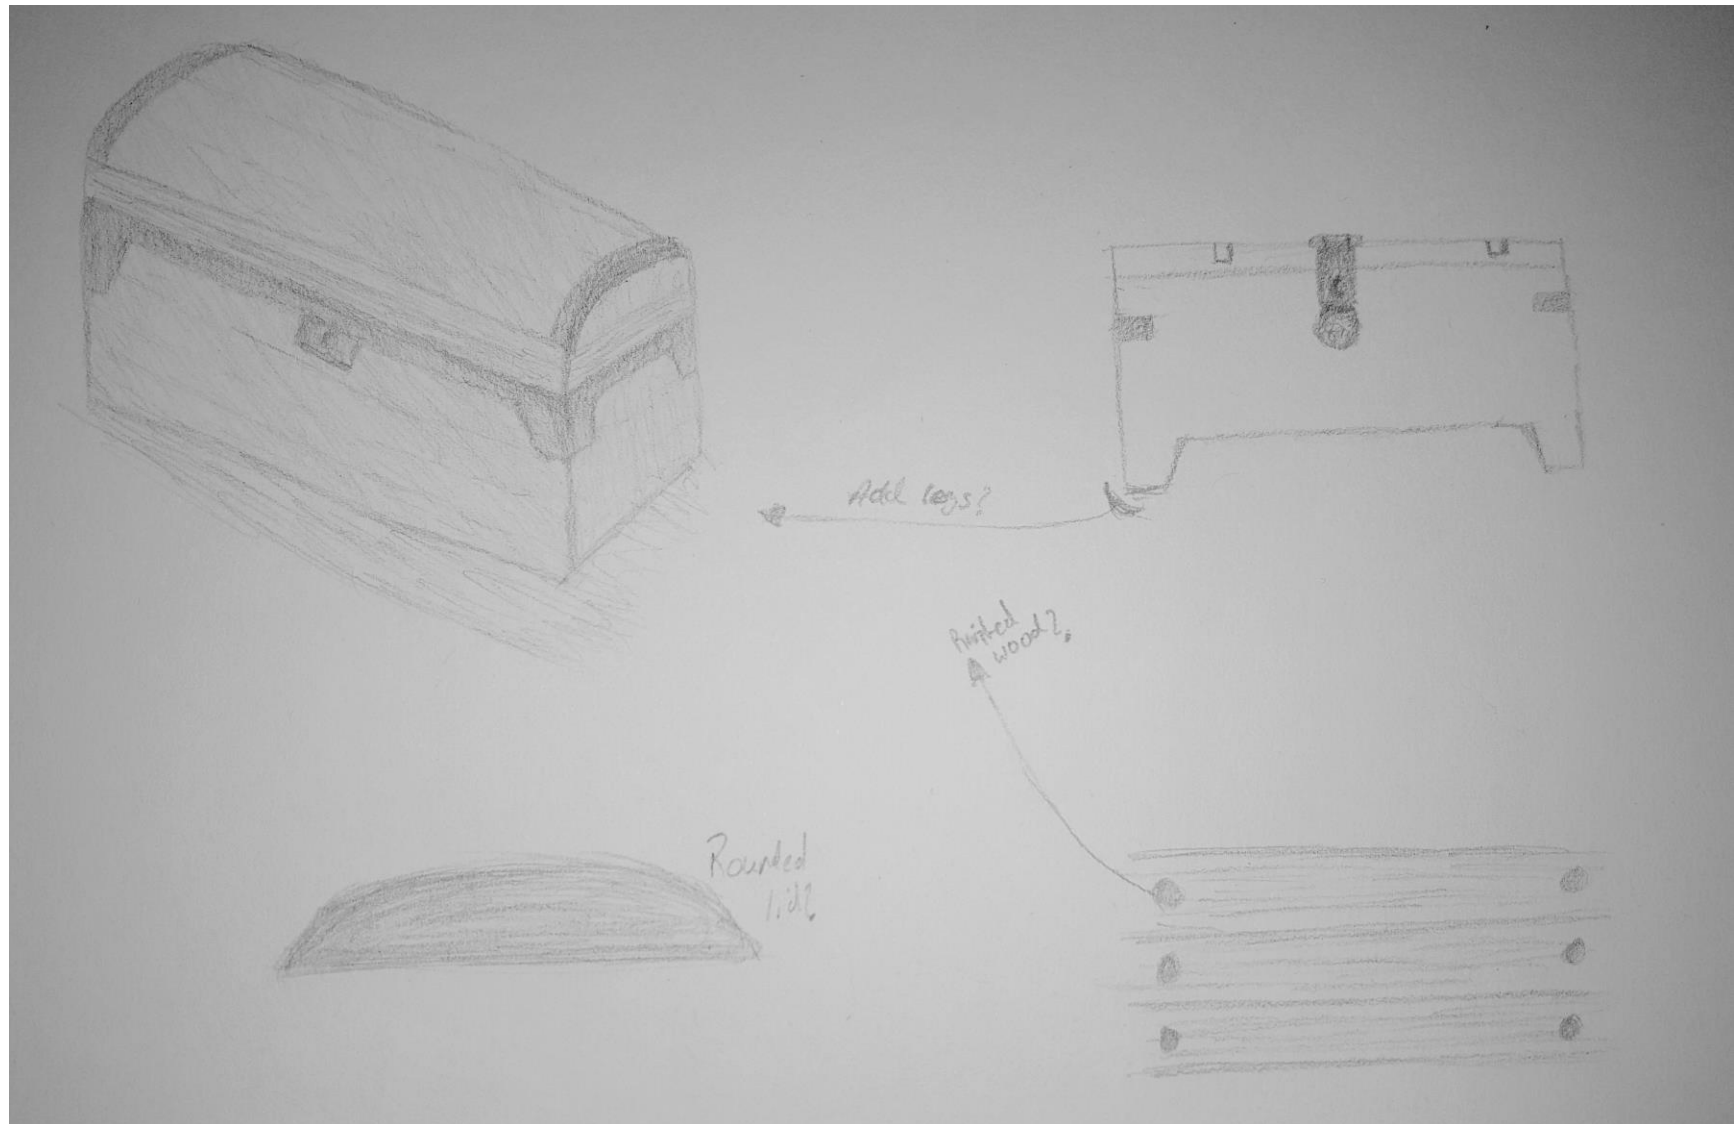

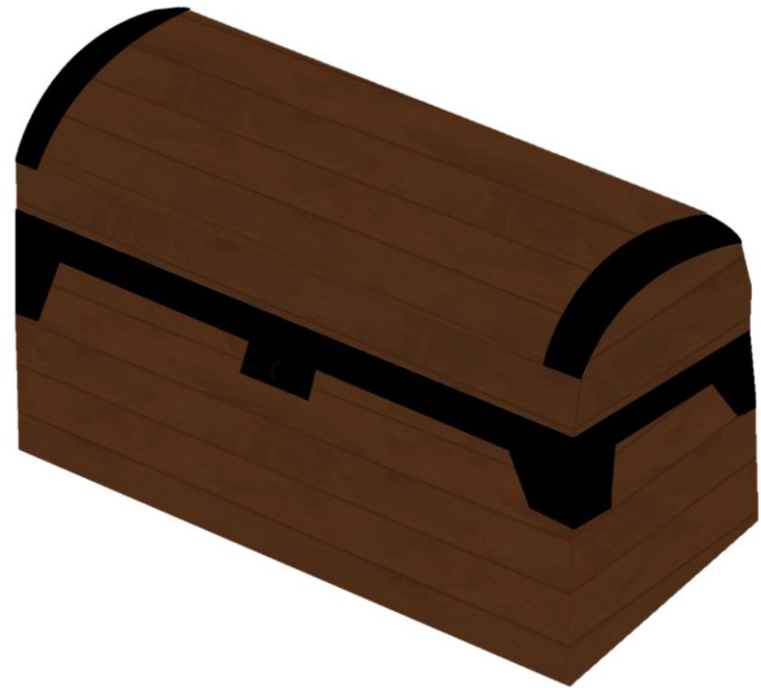

Trunk

The trunk will be in the master bedroom at the end of the level and is what the player is searching for within the mansion.

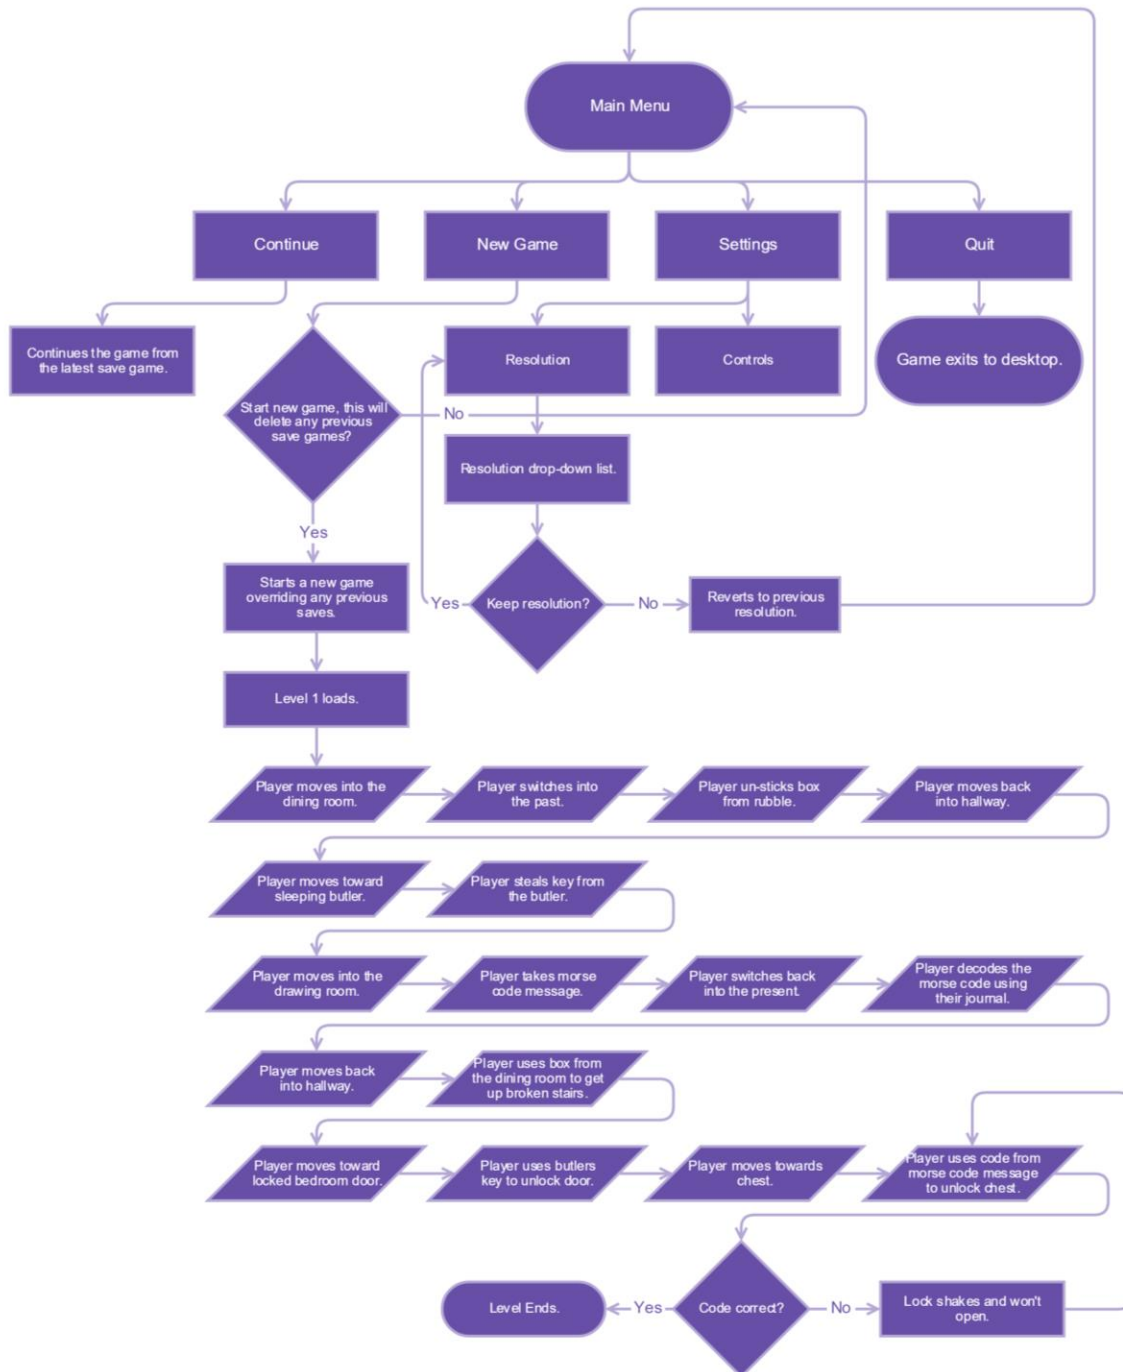

After completing the research and initial designs for the trunk this final piece was created.

Level Structure Research & Design

Flowchart

Action board

ACTION The game will start in the main hallway of the mansion. Off here is the butler pen, bathroom, drawing room, dining room and staircase.

AUDIO Past: Classical music - Present: Wind/rain ambiance.

In the dining room is the first puzzle the player will face. A box covered by rubble is in the present and they must unstick it in the past to get up the broken staircase.

Past: Classical music - Present: Wind/rain ambiance.

The player must steal the key to the bedroom from the butler/guard who is sleeping up the gate in their room in the past.

Past: Classical music, guard snoring - Present: Wind/rain.

ACTION In the drawing room there will be a morse code puzzle that the player must solve to get the combination for the lock on the chest at the end of the level.

AUDIO Past: Classical music - Present: Wind/rain ambiance.

Once the player has got the key, combination and box from the first floor they must make their way upstairs to the bedroom, unlocking the door with the key they have taken.

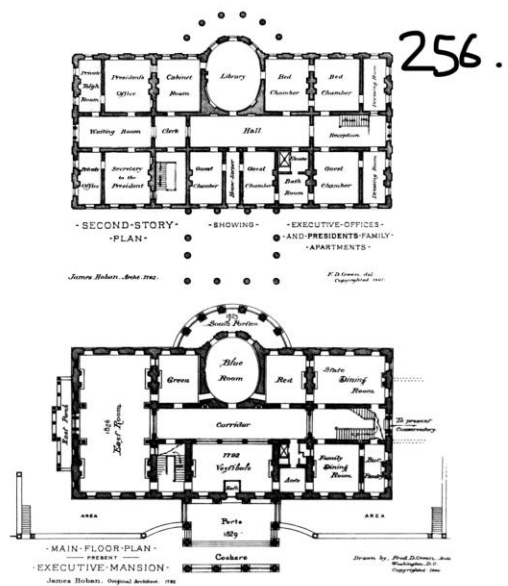

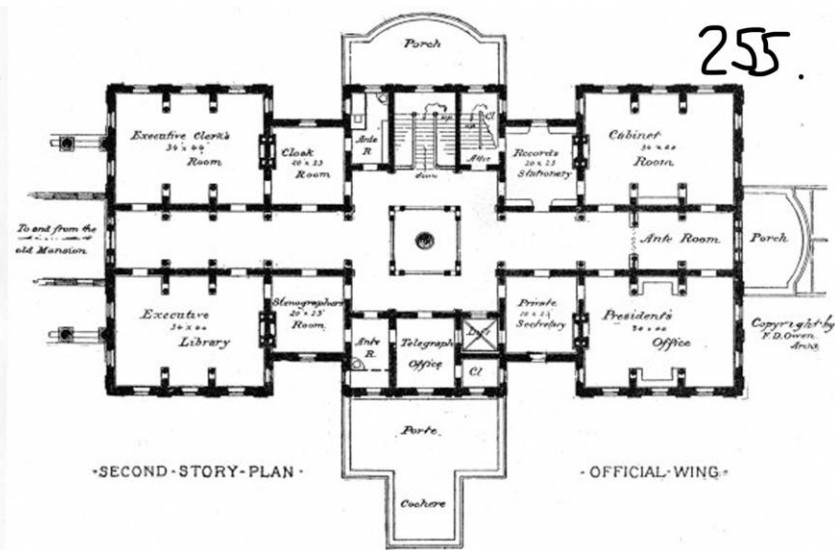

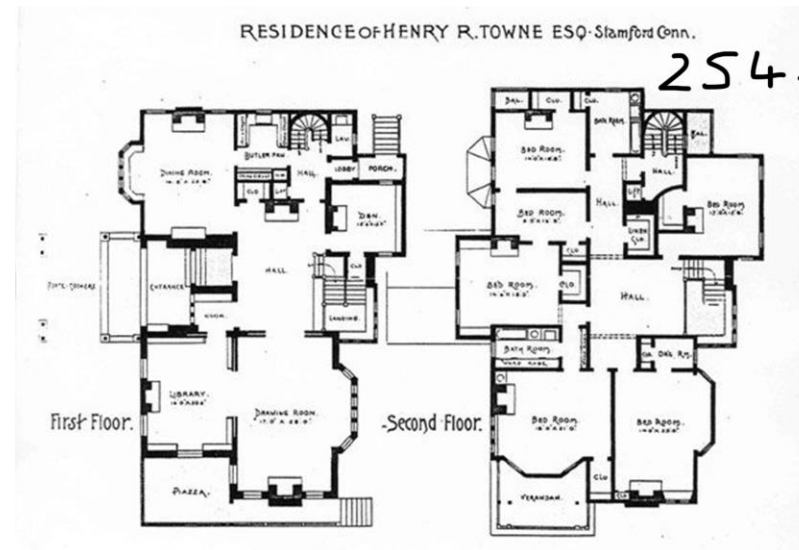

Past: Classical music - Present: Wind/rain, door opening.

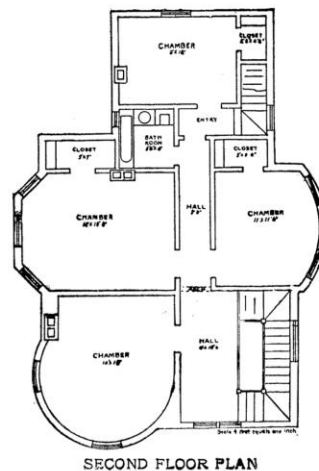

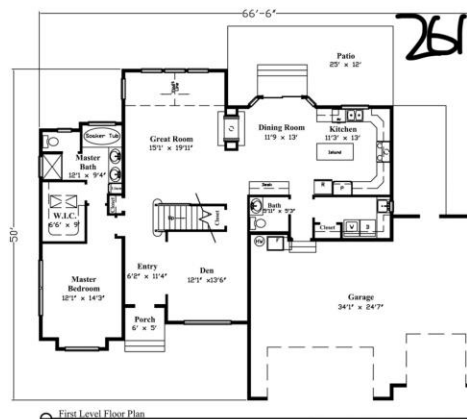

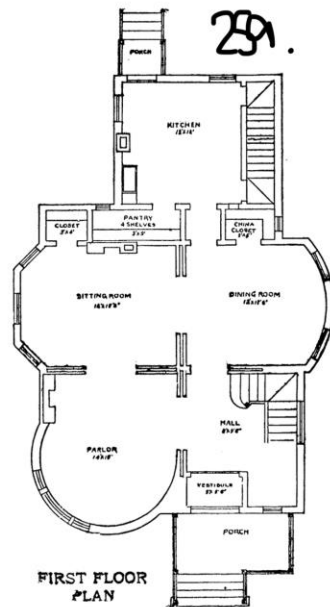

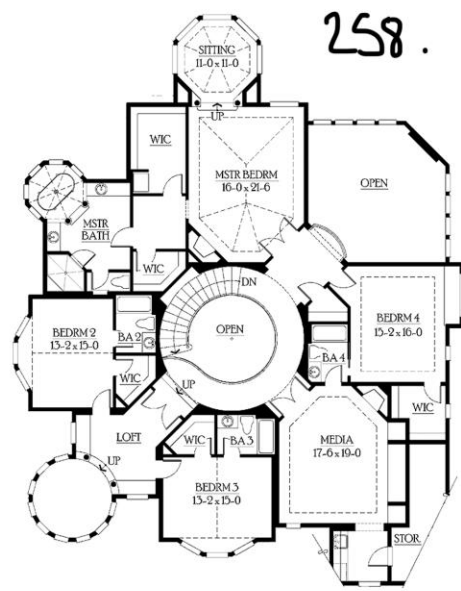

Once in the bedroom the player will see a chest locked with a combination lock, they must use the code learnt from the morse code puzzle to open the chest. This is the end of the level.

Past: Classical music - Present: Wind/rain, lock opening.

 THESE PLANS ARE FREE OF CHARGE TO YOU ON CONDITIONS EXPLAINED ON PAGE 2.

Using the research above of real life mansion building plans taken from the early 1900's the level plan for the game was thought out. The mansion follows a similar layout to the mansions of the time just with a bit more of a linear structure to make it fitting for a video game.

User Interface Research & Design

Heads Up Display (HUD)

Mirror does not really need a HUD as there is nothing like health, pickups or manna in the game which need to be displayed to the player. The only thing the player will see is a small crosshair in the middle of the screen which will help them aim at intractable objects. These objects will also have an outline so the player knows they are able to interact with it.

Menus

The main menu and in game menu will both be minimalistic to help keep them user friendly and appealing but will also in keep with the overall theme of the game.

Sound Research & Design

Overview

To help immerse the player in the game world a lot of ambience will be used to make the world feel real. This will consist of frequent creaking in the present along with wind and rain from the damage in the architecture. In the present there will be no real ambient sound except for the fire in the drawing room as it will be a pristine version of the building. To really hammer home the contrast between the two time zones there will be no music in the present as this is the run down, broken version of the world. But in the past there will be classical music coming from a record player in the drawing room which will emanate throughout the house.

Soundtrack List

Sound	Type	Area	Detail
Wind	Ambience	Present	There will be a wind ambience throughout the present as this is the broken down area and there will be holes in the structure.
Creaking	Ambience	Present	Due to the structure damage in the present there will be creaking in the background to make the player feel like they're in an old building.
Rain	Ambience	Present	There will be the faint sound of rain in the present when the player gets close to a window or hole in the structure.
Footsteps	Sound Effect	Present/Past	When the player walks there will be a footstep sound effect.
Classical music (1900's)	Music	Past	There will be classical music playing from the record player in the drawing room. This will help solidify the contrast between the two time zones.
Lock opening	Sound Effect	Present/Past	When the player opens the lock a sound effect will play.
Lock Wheel	Sound Effect	Present/Past	When the player spins one of the combination wheels on the lock the will be a clicking sound.

Lock hitting floor	Sound Effect	Present/Past	The lock will make a metal thud sound when it hits the floor.
Lock shake	Sound Effect	Present/Past	If the player enters the wrong code into the padlock it will shake, this will make a rattling sound effect.
Door opening	Sound Effect	Present/Past	The doors in the mansion will be grand, therefore will make a low squeaking sound when opened.
Time shift	Sound Effect	Present/Past	When the player switches time zone there will be a whoosh sound which will have a bit of base behind it, making it feel like a warp.
Butler snoring	Sound Effect	Past	In the past the butler will be sleeping in his room so the player will hear snoring coming from him.
Chest opening	Sound Effect	Past	When the player unlocks the chest at the end of the game the hinge will let off a creak.

All of these sounds will be made from scratch using foley which is the reproduction of everyday sounds using ordinary items in and around the home. This will ensure that all of the sounds fit into the game and are unique and fit for their purpose.
